WICKERSHAM URGES MODIFICATION FOR VOLSTEAD DRY LAW

Governors Asked To Aid
Enforcement By Law
Change

EASTERN POINT, Conn., July 16.—Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York today made public a letter from George W. Wickersham, chairman of President Hoover's law enforcement commission, in which the governor's conference was urged to recommend modification of the Volstead act.

Wickersham declared bringing prevention of importation, manufacture and shipment of intoxicants in interstate commerce under federal control and leaving to state authorities control of sale, saloons, and speakeasies, would make the Volstead act more easily enforceable and at the same time virtually strike a death blow to bootlegging.

Wickersham's letter, as read by Roosevelt, follows:

"Of course, one of the most serious subjects we must deal with is enforcement of the eighteenth amendment. The amendment confers on the states concurrent jurisdiction with the national government for enforcement of this measure.

"Thus far, the federal government alone has borne the brunt of this enforcement.

"It seems to me the governors' conference might well consider approaching the federal government on some feasible proposal to share this burden.

"If the national government were to attempt to preventing importation, manufacture and shipment of intoxicants in interstate commerce, the state undertaking, interstate, police regulation to prevent sale, saloons, speakeasies, etc., the national and state laws might be modified so as to become reasonably enforceable and one great source of demoralizing and pecuniarily profitable crime removed.

"Every state governor has sworn to support the constitution of the United States. The eighteenth amendment is a part of that constitution. Just as any other part. Surely it is pertinent to the governors' conference to suggest and consider how best to carry out this solemn undertaking."

Roosevelt interrupted reading of the letter to comment.

"Here," he said, "is something that affects not only New York, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, but all of your southern and all of your western states."

Twenty-six state executives were present for the three-day forum on problems of state administration.

On the eve of the conference, a contest over next year's convention place loomed. Governor Myers Y. Cooper was determined to take the conference to Ohio while Governor William G. Conley of West Virginia expected to urge White Sulphur Springs as the 1930 gathering place.

Last evening, a number of the governors and their wives and aides went for an hour's cruise in Long Island Sound.

AMERICANS WILL LEAVE FOR PARIS

ROME, July 16.—Roger C. Williams and Capt. Lewis A. Yancey will start for Paris in their famous trans-Atlantic monoplane Pathfinder at 5 a. m. tomorrow, it was announced here today.

The American fliers who spanned the Atlantic from Old Orchard Beach to Rome were expected at Santandrea, Spain, were expected at Litoro airport here today.

Dispatches from Milan reported that the American bird men visited during the morning and were warmly welcomed. Officials and employees of the plant gave them a striking ovation.

From Milan they went by airplane to Turin, where they inspected the Fiat motor works and then were to fly to Rome.

FLYERS TO ATTEMPT FLIGHT TO NEW YORK

The announcement came from officials of Wright Aeronautical Corporation who have received a message from Kingsford Smith asking advice on whether the old motor of the Southern Cross will stand another gruelling ocean hop.

FEDERAL FARM BOARD TURNS ATTENTION TO SUMMER WHEAT CROP

NECESSITY MOTHER OF CRIME

CLEVELAND, O., July 16.—Because stealing a watermelon is said to be no crime in Georgia, Nan Terry, 32, was fined the costs today in the court of police Judge Burt Griffin.

Railroad police caught Terry after a two-block chase in which he dropped a melon, taken from a box car in the food terminal, they told Griffin. More than 500 melons have been stolen there in the last few weeks, they said.

"For a Georgia boy, taking a watermelon is no crime—it's a necessity," Griffin said.

KUBALA SAVED FROM WRECKAGE OF PLANE BEFORE EXPLOSION

Details Of Crash Reveal
Ship Hit Stone

HORTA, AZORES, July 16.—Full details of the tragic death of the Polish flier Major Louis Idzikowski were made known here today by one of the residents of Graciosa Island, where the biplane crashed Saturday evening while its pilots were trying to land because of motor trouble.

It developed that Casimir Kubala, co-pilot of the Marshal Pilsudski, on which they were attempting to fly from Paris to the United States, was extricated from the wreckage of the plane but a few minutes before the explosion.

Had those who rushed to the aid of the aviators been a few minutes late in arriving, Kubala, too, might have met his death.

The airplane appeared over the village of Santa Cruz, not far from the scene of the disaster, about 7 p. m. Saturday. The plane circled the village three times. It was apparent to the on-lookers below that it was in trouble and was seeking a place to land. On the third circling the plane flew very low, as if trying to get some sort of a signal from the people as to a landing field.

Some of the folk never had seen a plane before, and the locality, because of the rough, rocky surface, usually is avoided by aviators.

As the people watched the plane sail away they saw it suddenly descend in a corn field a few miles from Santa Cruz. The people who saw it land rushed to the spot. On arriving there they found the plane upside down. It appears that in order to lighten the burden of the plane the fliers opened the gas line tanks. The fumes of the fuel had rendered Kubala almost unconscious.

The plane crashed against a low stone wall. The impact caused the machine to turn upside down. The fliers were found strapped to their seats. The people who reached them began immediately to loosen the straps. Major Kubala was rescued easily, but the rescuers were unable to extricate Idzikowski, who was pinned under, apparently by his legs.

While the rescuers were still working on the plane there came a terrific explosion. The plane was on fire. Some of the rescuers were thrown to the ground by the explosion. They continued frantically for a few minutes trying to get Idzikowski out of the ruins of the plane, but it was in vain.

Several of the rescuers were slightly burned.

The local authorities came on the scene quickly. In spite of his own painful injuries, Major Kubala tried several times to make yet another attempt to rescue his comrade. But on-lookers, knowing Idzikowski was dead, restrained him.

Idzikowski's body was under military guard all night and was removed at daylight.

CINCINNATI BANK TELLER IS SHORT

CINCINNATI, O., July 16.—James Dooley, 22, teller at the Second National Bank here, was placed under arrest today after the discovery of a $7,000 shortage in his accounts.

John Butting, vice president of the bank, said the alleged shortage was discovered during an audit completed yesterday.

Short Crop Brings Hope For Higher Price Level

WASHINGTON, July 16.—The federal farm board today turned its attention to the most urgent problem awaiting its consideration—movement of the current wheat crop, which already is filling storage bins at farms and export centers alike.

Selection of the eighth member of the board, the spokesmen for the wheat producers and marketing interests, is expected today or tomorrow. Completion of the board's personnel will enable the new administrative agency to immediately lay down its program for the next two months.

The second meeting of the board today had before it the mid-July crop forecast of the department of agriculture, which offered hope of a smaller world crop than had been heretofore anticipated. A world crop 325,000,000 bushels short of last year's production was declared probable in the department's report.

"Should the world's supply turn out to be as indicated, the average prices of all classes of wheat in the United States would be increased above the present levels," the survey said.

"The price of No. 2 hard winter wheat at Kansas City in the past year has averaged a little over $1.12 per bushel. A reduction of about 200,000,000 bushels in the world's supply might be expected to raise this average to about $1.30 per bushel, or within five cents of that figure."

"The world's area to be harvested now seems likely to be no larger than last year."

Against this factor, however, the survey set the present large carry-over stocks.

"The amount for world's carry-over of wheat on July 1, the report said, 'appears to be from approximately 100,000,000 to 125,000,000 bushels greater than last year, when it amounted to about 420,000,000 bushels.'

On the basis of present domestic crop forecasts, "corn prices are likely to be well maintained until the approach of the new marketing season next fall."

President Hoover has turned the entire farm rehabilitation program over to his board which is to carry out the administration program marketing bills.

"I invest you with responsibility, authority and resources such as have never before been conferred by our government in assistance to any industry," the president told the new board at the initial White House meeting yesterday.

FAHY FORCED DOWN; TO CONTINUE FLIGHT

WICHITA, Kan., July 16.—Lieut. Herbert J. Fahy, California flier held here by motor trouble after a forced landing on an attempt to span the United States from Los Angeles to New York, was ready today to continue his flight.

Fahy had intended to leave Monday but work was not completed on the oil pump of his engine which ceased to function near Keweenaw, Kan., last Sunday and caused him to land in a wheat field.

The flier was expected to proceed to New York and prepare to attempt the flight from there to Los Angeles.

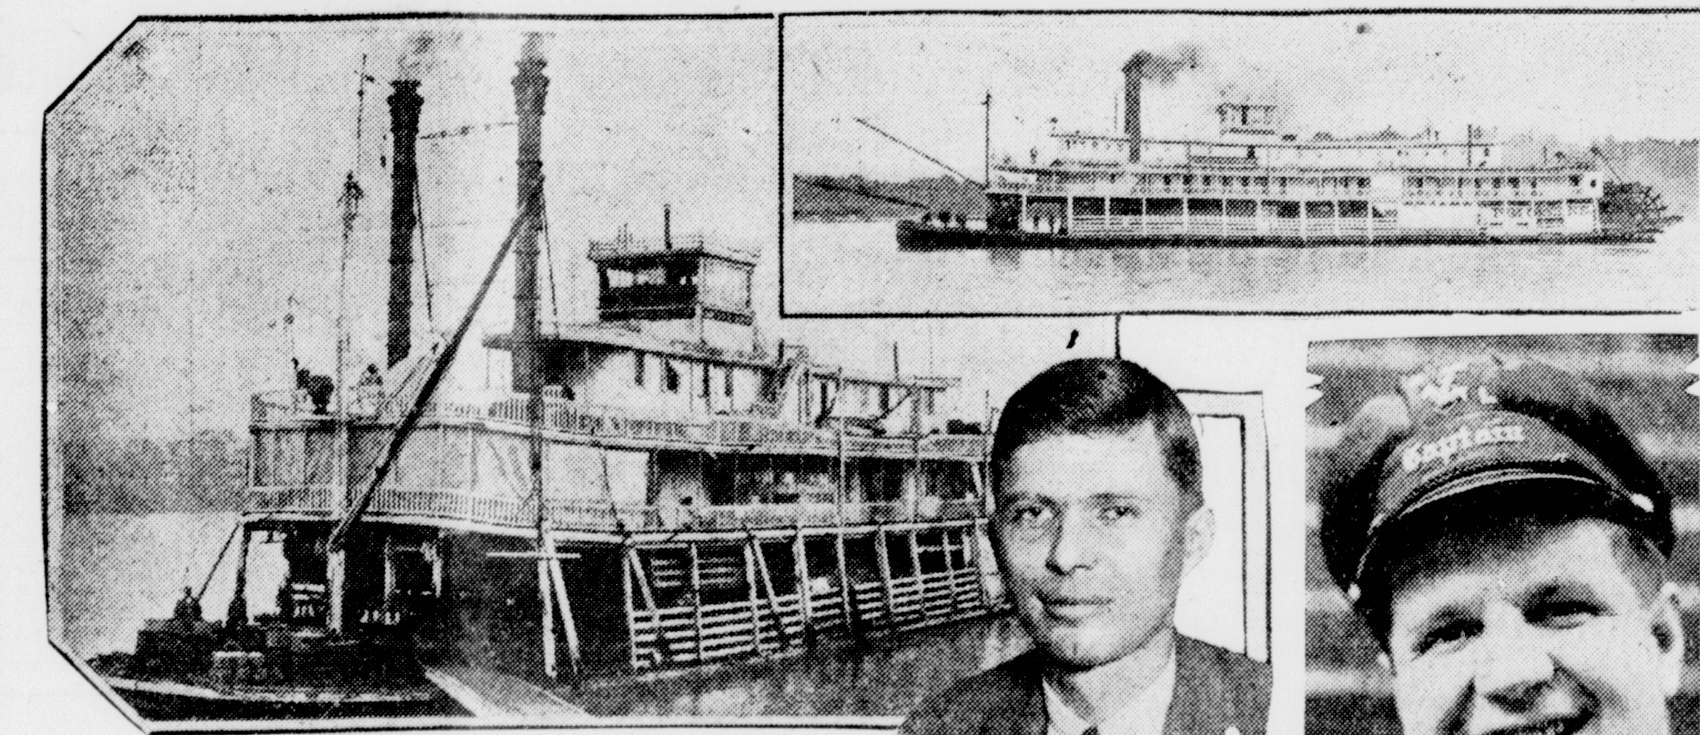

COLUMBUS, O., July 16.—Search was underway here today for Carey Burt, 55, a secondhand dealer, who is wanted in connection with the murder of Mrs. Mamie Schart, 34, mother of two children whose throat was slashed yesterday.

DAMAGE IN KANSAS FLOOD WILL REACH MORE THAN MILLION

Epidemic Is Feared;
Thousands Of Acres
Of Wheat Lost

HUTCHINSON, Kan., July 16.—Red Cross officials came to the aid of flood-stricken Hutchinson today as stores opened and citizens worked to restore normal conditions after flood waters had rushed three to six feet deep through most of the residence and business sections.

"Only immediate sanitary efforts can avert an epidemic in wake of the waters," said Mrs. J. Q. Donovan, Red Cross official.

Mayor H. J. Haskard has appealed for contributions for many families left in desperate straits by the inundation.

Little water was left in the city today, although first shoppers to enter the downtown business district were forced to remove their shoes to reach some of the stores.

Damage in Hutchinson was estimated at $1,000,000 but have in the countryside around the city pushed the toll higher. Thousands of acres of wheat were washed away and beaten down by the flood.

NO LANDLUBBER'S DEATH FOR HIM

NEW YORK, July 16.—"A sailor's home is no place for a sea-faring man to die," said Captain Millard L. Dunton, who had passed most of his seventy-seven years on the deck of a ship.

"I am going to die," Dunton told companions at Sailor's Snug Harbor, Staten Island, "and it's going to be on a ship."

So Dunton, feeble and ill, was loaded into a taxi and taken to the docks.

He chose The Sandwich, sailing for Portland, Me. "My daughter lives near Dunton said 'and if I die they can bury me at home.'"

As the Sandwich steamed out of the harbor Dunton was in the stern waving a feeble hand at friends. It was his last sea voyage, for he died in his stateroom after breathing for only a few hours, the salt air he loved.

TO RAID GAMBLERS ALL SUMMER LONG

ASHTABULA, O., July 16.—"We'll raid the place all summer long, if necessary," said Sheriff Frank S. Sheldon to those who had charged that gambling on a large scale is being conducted in connection with a so-called exclusive night club near Geneva.

Two raids made on the place last week were fruitless, Sheldon said. All alleged gambling paraphernalia had been disposed of, and officers found nothing unusual in their investigations.

County Prosecutor Howard M. Mazor said he had "positive knowledge that gambling is going on at the resort."

It had been charged that the shore resorts in the county permitted the operation of roulette wheels and dice tables for sophisticated patrons, and that the gambling had been conducted on a large scale.

THISTLEDOWN WILL NOT BE REOPENED; DISMISS CHARGES

Justice Finds Men Not Guilty In Gambling
Case

CLEVELAND, O., July 16.—No attempt will be made to open the track at Thistledown for racing, counsel for Edward P. Strong, owner of the track, said today, despite Strong's victory over Sheriff Edward J. Hanratty yesterday in proving that he was not guilty of permitting race track gambling at Thistledown.

Justice of the Peace Myron J. Penty discharged Strong and two employees after their trial on charges of having operated a system of betting that violated state laws against gambling.

Strong's counsel convinced Justice Penty in a two-hour court fight that there was no Ohio statute making the "contribution system," used at Thistledown, unlawful.

Despite the decision of the court, Sheriff Hanratty is ready with an army of deputies to close the track if it reopens and lets the contribution cages take in cash.

Hanratty bases his stand on the fact that the justice of the peace court is not a court of record, and the decision, therefore, is meaningless.

In case Thistledown is reopened, and the "contribution system" used, Strong will again be subject to arrest and trial in a justice of the peace court, or in probate court.

THE RACING HEART OF THE Betsay Ann will never weaken," said Captain Way. "The Betsay has a width of thirty-four feet and the Tom has a width of forty feet, but it's that extra six feet that's going to win for us."

Captain Greene believes the Tom Greene will cross the finish line at New Richmond several knots ahead of the Betsay, and that the prized elk horns will remain in possession of his steamers.

Mrs. Mary B. Greene, mother of the Greene line master and the only woman in the country holding a river pilot's license, will be in the Tom Greene's pilot house "to see that everything is all right."

The Betsay Ann, whose home port is Pittsburgh, is 165 feet long and the Tom Greene has a length of 200 feet. Both boats will leave Cincinnati on their regular schedule, with passengers and freight.

SEA SERPENT OR ELSE!

Strange Lake Champlain Monster Subject Of Fishermen's Yarn

WILLSBORO, N. Y., July 16.—Three young fishermen, still excited over their experience, insisted today they had seen the famous Lake Champlain sea serpent, whose existence has been affirmed and denied by a confusing combination of fact and fancy during the more than 300 years since the lake's discovery.

Thomas Bridge, of Willsboro village and two companions, Davis Riley and Wesley Quimby, were fishing at the mouth of the Bouquet River Sunday when what appeared to them to be a huge serpent or fish, thrust its head high above the surface of the lake. The monster began shaking its tail violently, lashing the water for acres around into a sea of foam.

THRILLING STEAMBOAT DAYS RECALLED BY RACE BETWEEN RIVER PACKETS

CINCINNATI, O., July 16.—The days of the Robert E. Lee and the Natchez—when steamboats held sway on inland waters—will be revived late today when two staunch steamers battle for speed supremacy of the Ohio River.

The Betsay Ann, gallant old mail boat of the lower Mississippi and the Tom Greene, hailed by the river folks as the fastest packet on the Ohio, will point their bows upstream at 5 p. m. and race from Cincinnati to New Richmond, over a twenty-one mile course.

Last year the Betsay Ann was vanquished in a spectacular race with the Chris Greene, sister ship of the Tom Greene, and lost her coveted pair of gilded elk horns.

The weather-worn antlers had adorned the Betsay's deck since her heyday on the Mississippi. Today's race will decide whether the fleet steamer will once again rule as monarch of the lazy Ohio.

THE RACE HAS NOT only keyed to a high pitch the captains and crews of the two packets, whose hearts beat faster to the romantic call of the Ohio, but has attracted nationwide attention and revived the colorful tales of the river days in the old South.

The Betsay Ann and Tom Greene have been friendly rivals in business for years and many the times they engaged in unofficial races.

"bearing his name, has promised Captain Frederick Way, master of the Betsay Ann, a return race with the Chris Greene if his packet stages a "come-back" today. And Captain Way predicts a glorious victory for the Betsay, a "low water" boat that skips merrily over the river under clear skies.

The Tom Greene, heavier than her rival, is at her best when the river level is high and Cincinnatians are literally praying for rain.

"THE RACING HEART OF THE Betsay Ann will never weaken," said Captain Way. "The Betsay has a width of thirty-four feet and the Tom has a width of forty feet, but it's that extra six feet that's going to win for us."

Captain Greene believes the Tom Greene will cross the finish line at New Richmond several knots ahead of the Betsay, and that the prized elk horns will remain in possession of his steamers.

Mrs. Mary B. Greene, mother of the Greene line master and the only woman in the country holding a river pilot's license, will be in the Tom Greene's pilot house "to see that everything is all right."

CLAIM CHINESE ASK RUSSIA TO EXTEND TIME IN ULTIMATUM

Moscow Tense But China
Calm And War Is
Scouted

By United Press

Forty-eight hours after the Soviet union's three-day ultimatum was handed to China's charge d'affaires at Moscow the general situation today stood as follows:

Reports from Harbin stated that 2,000 Russian soldiers crossed into Manchuria but avoided contact with Chinese forces.

The Russian populace burned with patriotic fervor and demanded that the government take strong measures in protecting the rights of the Soviet union. Tens of thousands of marchers pledged allegiance to the government.

In the capitals of China there was an atmosphere of calm and placidity. The Chinese people were not in the least excited, not even when it was reported that Dr. C. T. Wang, nationalist foreign minister, may not return to Nanking to form a reply to Russia until next Friday.

Other reports from Manchuria stated that the Mukden government continued to assume control of the Chinese Eastern Railway, over which the whole dispute had started.

The Europe capitals refused to believe that there would be war. Japan assumed an attitude of watchful waiting. The Japanese press criticized the tactics of China in seizing the road.

It was reported from Berlin that Russia already had chosen a representative for the conference in the event China accepts Russia's proposal to discuss all the elements involved in the control of the line.

MOSCOW, July 16.—Feelings were growing increasingly tense here today which, according to the newspaper Izvestia, is the "third and last day of the term set in the Soviet ultimatum to Russia to render a satisfactory answer regarding the seizure of the Eastern Railway at Harbin, Manchuria.

Other newspapers likewise assume that the zero hour of the Soviet ultimatum is midnight tonight. Nevertheless confusion persists regarding the expiration hour of the ultimatum which the foreign office has not yet clarified.

Charge d'affaires S. Yavel-Sun of China sent a memorandum for transmission to his government at 4 a. m. Sunday and worked all day long at a translation of it. He filed it to his government by telegraph at 1:30 p. m. Monday he asserted. Izvestia features this memorandum which justifies the Soviet position. It may be used as a pretext for the extension of the term of the ultimatum if Soviet officials find it necessary.

The keenest interest centers today about the report that the White Guardist leaders Ataman and Semigoff, with the help of the Nanking government, is scheming a raid on Soviet territory to establish a White Guardist buffer state. Semigoff's name recalls to the Soviets the most brutal white guard outrages in Siberia, which persisted even after Kolchak's downfall. If the report of his intentions are true, it is believed this would oblige the Soviet officials to take up arms regardless of their frank anxiety to avoid bloodshed.

It is believed that the Soviets are attempting unsuccessfully to obtain a vista for one of their leading railroad experts, Leonid Serberiaf, former president of the Soviet union, to go to Manchuria to be in readiness to conduct negotiations if the Chinese are willing. Serberiaf was formerly assistant commissar of railroads and exiled as a follower of Leon Trotsky. Later he was readmitted to the party.

LONDON, July 16.—The exchange Telegraph agency's Riga, Latvia, correspondent reported today that China has requested the Soviet government for an extension of the three day period of the ultimatum on the Harbin incident, in view of the prolonged delay in transmission of the Soviet's note.

Short Crop Brings Hope For Higher Price Level

WASHINGTON, July 16.—The federal farm board today turned its attention to the most urgent problem awaiting its consideration—movement of the current wheat crop, which already is filling storage bins at farms and export centers alike.

Selection of the eighth member of the board, the spokesmen for the wheat producers and marketing interests, is expected today or tomorrow. Completion of the board's personnel will enable the new administrative agency to immediately lay down its program for the next two months.

The second meeting of the board today had before it the mid-July crop forecast of the department of agriculture, which offered hope of a smaller world crop than had been heretofore anticipated. A world crop 325,000,000 bushels short of last year's production was declared probable in the department's report.

"Should the world's supply turn out to be as indicated, the average prices of all classes of wheat in the United States would be increased above the present levels," the survey said.

"The price of No. 2 hard winter wheat at Kansas City in the past year has averaged a little over $1.12 per bushel. A reduction of about 200,000,000 bushels in the world's supply might be expected to raise this average to about $1.30 per bushel, or within five cents of that figure.

"The world's area to be harvested now seems likely to be no larger than last year's."

Against this factor, however, the survey set the present large carry-over stocks.

"The accounted for world's carry-over of wheat on July 1," the report said, "appears to be from approximately 100,000,000 to 125,000,000 bushels greater than last year, when it amounted to about 420,000,000 bushels."

On the basis of present domestic crop forecasts, "corn prices are likely to be well maintained until the approach of the new marketing season next fall."

President Hoover has turned the entire farm rehabilitation program over to his board which is to carry out the administration program marketing bills.

It invests with responsibility, authority and resources such as have never before been conferred by our government in assistance to any industry," the president told the new board at the initial White House meeting yesterday.

FAHY FORCED DOWN; TO CONTINUE FLIGHT

WICHITA, Kan., July 16.—Lieut. Herbert J. Fahy, California flier, held here by motor trouble after a forced landing on an attempt to span the United States from Los Angeles to New York, was ready today to continue his flight.

Fahy had intended to leave Monday but work was not completed on the oil pump of his engine which ceased to function near Kiowa, Kan., last Sunday and caused him to land in a wheat field.

The flier was expected to proceed to New York and prepare to attempt the flight from there to Los Angeles.

SOUGHT FOR MURDER IN COLUMBUS CASE

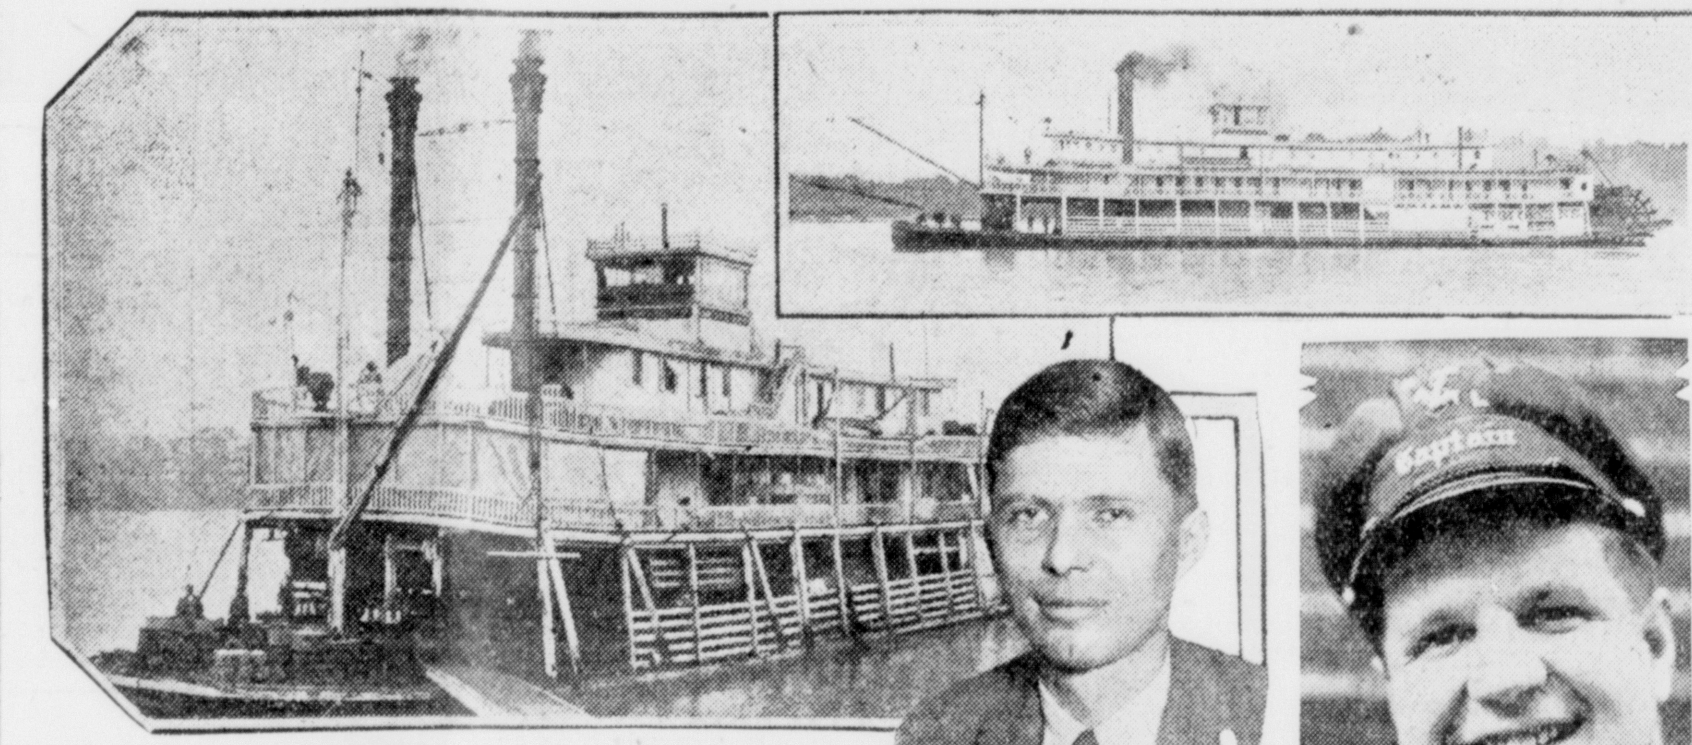

COLUMBUS, O., July 16.—Search was underway here today for Carey Burt, 55, a secondhand dealer, who is wanted in connection with the murder of Mrs. Mamie Scharf, 34, mother of two children whose throat was slashed yesterday.

Mrs. Scharf's body was sent to her home in Coaltown, near Jackson, today. Police said Burt had been seen the woman since she became estranged from her husband two years ago. She was killed on the eve of her return to Scharf.

CARS PILE UP

COLUMBUS, O., July 16.—Twenty cars of a Hocking Valley freight train piled up on the outskirts of Columbus today when one of the cars dropped a journal. No one was injured. The track was torn up for more than a quarter of a mile.

STEAMBOAT RACE RECALLS THRILLING DAYS ON OHIO

STRANGE TALES

RICE LAKE, Wis., July 16.—An irate farmer who lives near Rice Lake, has offered a reward of $100 for information which will lead to the arrest and conviction of the party who "bobbed" the tails of his cows while they were being pastured.

THISTLEDOWN WILL NOT BE REOPENED; DISMISS CHARGES

Justice Finds Men Not Guilty In Gambling
Case

CLEVELAND, O., July 16.—No attempt will be made to open the track at Thistledown for racing, counsel for Edward P. Strong, owner of the track, said today, despite Strong's victory over Sheriff Edward J. Hanratty yesterday in proving that he was not guilty of permitting race track gambling at Thistledown.

Justice of the Peace Myron J. Penny discharged Strong and two employees after their trial on charges of having operated a system of betting that violated state laws against gambling.

Strong's counsel convinced Justice Penny in a two-hour court fight that there was no Ohio statute making the "contribution system," used at Thistledown, unlawful.

Despite the decision of the court, Sheriff Hanratty is ready with an army of deputies to close the track if it reopens and lets the contribution cages take in cash.

Hanratty bases his stand on the fact that the justice of the peace court is not a court of record, and the decision, therefore, is meaningless.

In case Thistledown is reopened, and the "contribution system" used, Strong will again be subject to arrest and trial in a justice of the peace court, or in probate court.

Even though Strong wins in these courts he will still be subject to arrest so long as the sheriff believes the "contribution" system is in violation of Ohio laws.

NO LANDLUBBER'S DEATH FOR HIM

NEW YORK, July 16.—"A sailors' home is no place for a seafaring man to die," said Captain Millard L. Dunton, who had passed most of his seventy-seven years on the deck of a ship.

"I am going to die," Dunton told companions at Sailor's Snug Harbor, Staten Island, "and it's going to be on a ship."

So Dunton, feeble and ill, was loaded into a taxi and taken to the docks.

He chose The Sandwich, sailing for Portland, Me. "My daughter lives near there," Dunton said "and if I die they can bury me at home."

As the Sandwich steamed out of the harbor Dunton was in the stern waving a feeble hand at friends. It was his last sea voyage, for he died in his stateroom after breathing for only a few hours, the salt air he loved.

TO RAID GAMBLERS ALL SUMMER LONG

ASHTABULA, O., July 16.—"We'll raid the place all summer long, if necessary. We'll rid Ashtabula County of this resort if it takes the whole law enforcement machinery of the county to do it."

This was the ultimatum today of Sheriff Frank S. Sheldon to those who had charged that gambling on a large scale is being conducted in connection with a so-called exclusive night club near Geneva.

Two raids made on the place last week were fruitless, Sheldon said. All alleged gambling paraphernalia had been disposed of, and officers found nothing unusual in their investigations.

County Prosecutor Howard M. Mazor said he had "positive knowledge that gambling is going on at the resort."

It had been charged that the shore resorts in the county permitted the operation of roulette wheels and dice tables for sophisticated patrons, and that the gambling had been conducted on a large scale.

THRILLING STEAMBOAT DAYS RECALLED BY RACE BETWEEN RIVER PACKETS

CINCINNATI, O., July 16.—The days of the Robert E. Lee and the Natchez—when steamboats held sway on inland waters—will be revived late today when two staunch steamers battle for speed supremacy of the Ohio River.

The Betsy Ann, gallant old mail boat of the lower Mississippi and the Tom Greene, hailed by the river folks as the fastest packet on the Ohio, will point their bows upstream at 5 p. m. and race from Cincinnati to New Richmond, over a twenty-one mile course.

Last year the Betsy Ann was vanquished in a spectacular race with the Chris Greene, sister ship of the Tom Greene, and lost her coveted pair of gilded elk horns. The weather-worn antlers had adorned the Betsy's deck since her heyday on the Mississippi. Today's race will decide whether the fleet steamer will once again rule as monarch of the lazy Ohio.

THE RACE HAS NOT only keyed to a high pitch the captains and crews of the two packets, whose hearts beat faster to the romantic call of the Ohio, but has attracted nationwide attention and revived the colorful tales of the river days in the old South.

The Betsy Ann and Tom Greene have been friendly rivals in business for years and many the times they engaged in unofficial races.

Tom Greene, master of the ship bearing his name, has promised Captain Frederick Way, master of the Betsy Ann, a return race with the Chris Greene if his packet stages a "come-back" today. And Captain Way predicts a glorious victory for the Betsy, a "low water" boat that skips merrily over the river under clear skies.

The Tom Greene, heavier than her rival, is at her best when the river level is high and Cincinnatians are literally praying for rain.

"THE RACING HEART of the Betsy Ann will never weaken," said Captain Way. "The Betsy has a width of thirty-four feet and the Tom has a width of forty feet, but it's that extra six feet that's going to win for us."

The promises were made at the request of Kuo Min Tang, semi-official organization of the San Francisco Chinatown.

CLAIM CHINESE ASK RUSSIA TO EXTEND TIME IN ULTIMATUM

Moscow Tense But China
Calm And War Is
Scouted

By United Press

Forty-eight hours after the Soviet union's three-day ultimatum was handed to China's charge d'affaires at Moscow the general situation today stood as follows:

Reports from Harbin stated that 2,000 Russian soldiers crossed into Manchuria but avoided contact with Chinese forces.

The Russian populace burned with patriotic fervor and demanded that the government take strong measures in protecting the rights of the Soviet union. Tens of thousands of marchers pledged allegiance to the government.

In the capitals of China there was an atmosphere of calm and placidity. The Chinese people were not in the least excited, not even when it was reported that Dr. C. T. Wang, Nationalist foreign minister, may not return to Nanking to form a reply to Russia until next Friday.

Other reports from Manchuria stated that the Mukden government continued to assume control of the Chinese Eastern Railway, over which the whole dispute had started.

The Europe capitals refused to believe that there would be war. Japan assumed an attitude of watchful waiting. The Japanese press criticized the tactics of China in seizing the road.

It was reported from Berlin that Russia already had chosen a representative for the conference in the event China accepts Russia's proposal to discuss all the elements involved in the control of the line.

MOSCOW, July 16.—Feelings were growing increasingly tense here today which, according to the newspaper Izvestia, is the "third and

WHEN BABY TODDLES, PAINT SUFFERS

Modern mothers will be interested in news about special cleaning product that keeps hospitals gleaming

Probably there never will be a way to keep baby hands from getting dirty or to keep that dirt from being transferred to white doors, window-sills and baseboards.

But there's a way now to quickly erase all smudges from painted surfaces. No hard scrubbing. No lye, caustic soda or gritty "pot-and-pan" cleansers. Just the same method used for years by leading hospitals, hotels and public buildings. Just a dash of Wyandot on a damp sponge. A free, effortless rub across the soiled surface. And dirt and grime have disappeared. Certainly nothing ever worked so swiftly or so easily. Nothing was ever so safe for use on sensitive, costly surfaces—or so easy on the hands. The great institutions use Wyandot exclusively because they know it saves them thousands of dollars in repainting and the replacement of porcelain fixtures—and at the same time obtains absolute cleanliness.

Wyandot is ready for you at all grocers. Large can, only 15c. Guaranteed to satisfy, 100%.

FRANCIS KLEIN IS HURT WHEN STRUCK BY AUTO ON MONDAY

Knocked down by a sedan driven by Kenneth Fulkerson, Lower Bellbrook Pike, as he was walking across E. Second St. to deliver ice to a customer, Francis A. Klein, 920 W. Second St., member of the firm of Klein Bros., proprietors of the Silver Lake Ice Co., was rendered unconscious and sustained painful but not serious injuries at 9:30 p. m. Monday.

Klein was carried into the office of Ray Cox, insurance agent, in the Messenger Bldg., where an examination made by Dr. W. A. Galloway disclosed his injuries included a painful bump on the right forehead and minor bruises. He remained in a stunned condition, however, for some time.

The ice man was walking to the north side of E. Second St., carrying a 100-pound cake of ice when the machine struck him. The sedan, driven by Fulkerson and also occupied by Earl Bone, Wilmington Pike, was traveling west.

THE LAXATIVE WITH HIGHEST ENDORSEMENT

When you get out of bed feeling headachy, sluggish, weak, half-sick, here's a simple measure that will have you feeling yourself again in a jiffy.

Take a little Phillips Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water or lemonade. Two to four tablespoonsful is the usual adult dose. Taken in lemonade, Phillips Milk of Magnesia acts like citrate of magnesia. Take it like this an hour before breakfast. By the time you leave home, you'll be surprised by your improvement.

As a mild, safe, pleasant laxative, Phillips Milk of Magnesia has the highest medical endorsement. As an anti-acid to correct sour stomach, gas, indigestion, biliousness, it has been standard with doctors for over fifty years. To know its quick relief in digestive and eliminative troubles of men, women, children—and babies—is to keep a bottle always handy.

Full directions for all its uses come with every bottle. All drug stores have the generous 25c and 50c sizes. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of the Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor, Chas. H. Phillips, since 1875. Adv.

ROBBINS AND MYERS TO REOPEN XENIA BRANCH PLANT MONDAY

The abandoned Xenia plant of the Robbins and Myers, Inc., Springfield, O., located on Home Ave., closed since 1921, will be re-opened next Monday morning at 7 o'clock for the manufacture of motors and fans, according to an announcement made by company officials at Springfield Tuesday.

Simultaneous with the announcement, the company issued an appeal for fifty girls, experienced workers, to apply at the plant Thursday evening, July 18 between 7 and 8 o'clock for employment.

For the present the company plans to employ about forty girls at the local plant but eventually employment will be provided for nearly 200 men and women, it is announced. That many workers were employed when the plant was being operated at its full capacity in 1920 and 1921.

The property of the Xenia plant includes four buildings which have been rented out for storage purposes since the factory was closed down in 1921.

No remodeling work is expected to be made as the buildings have been kept in first class condition. The Springfield company expects to equip the Xenia plant with machinery brought here from Springfield.

The plant was originally used as a fuse factory and was operated by the old powder mills at Gess Station. Later it was abandoned and stood idle for a number of years until it was taken over by the Robbins and Myers company in 1920.

For the last two years Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Gotthard, Springfield employed as caretakers, have been making the plant their residence.

JIGGER IS GADGET THAT JIGS UNDER YOUR SKIN

Have you a little jigger in your ankle? Not a gadget, a jigger, a sort of insect. And not a husband, either.

A jigger is an insect of prey. It lays in wait for its victim, pounces on him, bores in under the skin, and then the victim prays. That's why it is an insect of prey like a bird of prey.

The jigger is not particularly about its victim. It will feast on man or beast. And if the man turns out to be a beast the jigger is just that much happier. It writes home about it. And all its relatives and neighbors come in their dinner suits and with their teeth filed sharp, to feast also.

The jigger is a hairy insect. Under the magnifying glass it looks like Tarzan of the Aes without his spear. The jigger doesn't carry a spear. It just feels like he does. When the jigger attacks he shuts his eyes and bores in under the skin. Once under the skin and he finds that beauty is only skin deep, he becomes saddened and stops. But no amount of money will make him come out. He seizes bribes. Like the mayor of Dover.

After the jigger has filled himself perhaps he can't back out through the hole he made going in. So he stays there all the time and has to go to bed without any ice cream and cries himself to sleep. Finally he dies and then he oozes back out of the skin.

There are two ways to avoid jiggers. One is to refrain from all picnic outings in the realm of jiggers and the other to wear a suit of armor and take a jigger hound with you. The jigger hound is a hound whose skin has never been touched up by fleas. The jiggers get on the hound and forget all about you.

If you are unlucky enough to attract a family of jiggers, there are lots of things you can do to get rid of them. You can try rubbing them with kerosene or salt or any of the drug store remedies, or you can rub them with embalming fluid. This embalms the jigger and makes him think he is dead and he comes out. The only trouble with any of these remedies is that none of them work. In that respect they are different from the jigger.

CITIES TO DISCUSS SUGGESTED CHANGE IN DIXIE HIGHWAY

Xenia has been invited to send representatives to a luncheon at the Hotel Bancroft in Springfield at 12:30 o'clock Wednesday at which plans will be discussed with regard to carrying out a campaign to divert tourists from Toledo to Cincinnati through Springfield, Xenia and Lebanon.

In a letter received by Dilver Belden, auto club secretary, from H. D. Brydon, secretary of the Springfield Auto Club, Tuesday, it was pointed out that the question of rerouting the popular Dixie Highway through Springfield, Xenia and Lebanon to Cincinnati was recently brought up for consideration.

While the proposition will probably not be acknowledged this season, it was suggested in the letter that cities interested in the plan can at least band together to stage a campaign that will divert some of the traffic from Toledo to Cincinnati through Springfield, Xenia and other cities that would be placed on the Dixie Highway in the event it is eventually rerouted.

The luncheon Wednesday was decided upon as the first step in outlining plans for the proposed campaign.

TRIANGULAR SITE FOR ARMORY GIVEN MERCHANTS' FAVOR

The triangular tract in the new Dadds Addition, the one most favored by Brig. Gen. Arthur W. Reynolds, adjutant-general of Ohio, was endorsed by the Xenia Retail Merchants' Association Monday afternoon as the site for Xenia's new $50,000 state armory.

The site under consideration includes twelve platted lots, which may be purchased from lot-holders for $3,225. Inasmuch as sewer and water connections must be installed and the land graded without expense to the state, the total cost of the proposed site would be approximately $5,000, it is estimated.

Considering the ideal location, the fact the site was definitely approved by the adjutant-general and that Company L, 147th Infantry, Ohio National Guard, is particularly in favor of the location, the merchants went on record to the effect the armory should be erected at this point.

It is probable that City Commission will authorize a bond issue, the proceeds of which will be used to purchase the land, and that the state will be able to proceed with construction of the new building at an early date.

"The Home of Thrift"

The business of a well-managed building association is always profitable, whatever the prevailing financial conditions. This is so because it pays a fixed price for deposits and receives a fixed higher interest for the money it loans. The difference is the profit from which expenses are first paid, and the residue is carried into the reserve for future needs or emergencies. Losses are not taken from current earnings.

In this association, based on present assets, that profit is well above $200,000 a year. A large part of this remains as a surplus, after paying all expenses, and is carried into our Reserve and Safety Funds, there to further insure the complete safety of our deposits.

The possibility that the demands made upon this Reserve will ever be so large as to even greatly diminish it is so remote as to be negligible. That has been demonstrated in the past 12 months, in which conditions have been the most unfavorable in several decades. In that time we have not only kept free from any considerable accumulation of real estate, but have increased our Reserve in a large amount.

THE LAXATIVE WITH HIGHEST ENDORSEMENT

When you get out of bed feeling headachy, sluggish, weak, half-sick, here's a simple measure that will have you feeling yourself again in a jiffy.

Take a little Phillips Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water—or lemonade. Two to four tablespoons is the usual adult dose. Taken in lemonade, Phillips Milk of Magnesia acts like citrate of magnesia. Take it like this an hour before breakfast. By the time you leave home, you'll be surprised by your improvement.

As a mild, safe, pleasant laxative, Phillips Milk of Magnesia has the highest medical endorsement. As an anti-acid to correct sour stomach, gas, indigestion, biliousness, it has been standard with doctors for over fifty years. To know its quick relief in digestive and eliminative troubles of men, women, children—and babies—is to keep a bottle always handy.

Full directions for all its uses come with every bottle. All drug stores have the generous 25c and 50c sizes.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of the Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor, Chas. H. Phillips, since 1875. Adv.

ROBBINS AND MYERS TO REOPEN XENIA BRANCH PLANT MONDAY

The abandoned Xenia plant of the Robbins and Myers, Inc., Springfield, O., located on Home Ave., closed since 1921, will be re-opened next Monday morning at 7 o'clock for the manufacture of motors and fans, according to an announcement made by company officials at Springfield Tuesday.

Simultaneous with the announcement, the company issued an appeal for fifty girls, experienced workers, to apply at the plant Thursday evening, July 18 between 7 and 8 o'clock for employment.

For the present the company plans to employ about forty girls at the local plant but eventually employment will be provided for nearly 200 men and women, it is announced. That many workers were employed when the plant was being operated at its full capacity in 1920 and 1921.

The property of the Xenia plant includes four buildings which have been rented out for storage purposes since the factory was closed down in 1921.

No remodeling work is expected to be made as the buildings have been kept in first class condition. The Springfield company expects to equip the Xenia plant with machinery brought here from Springfield.

The plant was originally used as a fuse factory and was operated by the old powder mills at Goes Station. Later it was abandoned and stood idle for a number of years until it was taken over by the Robbins and Myers company in 1920.

For the last two years Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Gothard, Springfield employed as caretakers, have been making the plant their residence.

HOW ABOUT THIS?

July 15, 1929.

Dear Editor:

I have been very much interested in the progressive ideas of some of our good citizens in regard to an armory, airport and water softening plant, and I am now wondering what becomes of these ideas, as we do not seem to see any results.

It seems to me that every County Seat should have an armory in order to encourage the boys who belong to the Ohio National Guards, and besides I understood the State of Ohio was to furnish Fifty Thousand Dollars to build the building if the City would furnish the lot on which to build it. This seems a small price to me. In other words, Xenia gives the State about Five Thousand Dollars and in return we get a building worth Fifty Thousand Dollars and the building is maintained by the State.

Why can't Xenia shake off some of the old foggy methods and be progressive? It doesn't cost any more in the end as taxes seem to be about the same.

Let us get busy and grab this armory, or maybe all is being done that is possible. If this is so, tell us about the progress that is being made. An armory building would fill a great need in Xenia, first, as a home for the National Guards, and second, as a community building large enough to accommodate large gatherings, such as conventions, agricultural groups, athletics and many other things one could mention.

I noticed what the Xenia Gazette had to say about an airport and I think this is another progressive idea that we should put across. There are a great many citizens in Xenia who are willing to get behind any progressive movement, so give us a leader and we can do just as much as other towns our size.

Willing Worker and Tax Payer.

COMMUNITY CHEST OFFICERS TO REMAIN SAME FOR SECOND DRIVE

A constitution for the Xenia Community Chest organization was adopted at a meeting of the chest board of directors Monday night.

Because a decision was reached to hold the annual election of directors and officers of the board in January each year, the present directors and officers will continue to serve for the second annual chest campaign planned for next fall, probably in November, it is announced.

The directors have charge of management and administration of the affairs of the chest organization and the board is composed of two members elected from each institutional member and from the public at large a number equal to two more than the members representing the institutions.

In forming a permanent chest organization, the objects are to strengthen and make socially efficient the spirit of human helpfulness in Xenia; to afford the citizens the opportunity to contribute to welfare work through a community chest; to co-ordinate the work of the charitable, civic, philanthropic and benevolent organizations of Xenia and vicinity; to promote cooperation, efficiency and economy in their operations and to prevent as much as possible overlapping of efforts.

It was also decided by the directors that the personnel of the present executive and budget committees shall also remain the same for the coming drive. The latter committee is made up of seven members appointed by the directors from the public at large group outside the institutional membership group, and its duties are to consider and decide all matters pertaining to the allowance, increase and reduction of the budgets of the institutional members participating in any money-raising campaign.

Directors of the chest organization, in making preliminary preparations for the annual fall chest drive, are expected to appoint a general chairman for the campaign soon.

XENIA CHAUTAUQUA ASSURED IN 1930; CHILD SIGNS LIST

Xenia will have a Redpath Chautauqua program in 1930.

This assurance was given Tuesday with an announcement by William Slater, chautauqua manager, that 200 guarantors, exactly the needed quota, have been obtained to underwrite the entertainment for next year.

When the chautauqua program closed last Friday night only 159 signers on the guarantee list had been obtained. Chautauqua workers, not discouraged, made a concerted drive to get the required forty-one more signatures and their efforts were crowned with success after three extra days of work.

With the campaign successfully terminated, Mr. Slater left Tuesday morning for Mr. Vernon, O., where the chautauqua opens its next engagement this week.

One incident that inspired chautauqua workers to greater efforts in behalf of the 1930 program was the fact a 9-year-old boy, Willard Bennington, was so "sold" on chautauqua that he begged and received the consent of his parents to become a guarantor. He expects to personally earn enough money to be responsible for four tickets, equivalent to $10. He is the youngest guarantor to sign the list, it was disclosed.

CINCINNATI MAN OPENS FRAZER STORE

Announcement was made Tuesday that Samuel Burgin, Cincinnati, has purchased the stock and fixtures of the Frazer Shoe Store at 11 E. Main St., and that the store is being re-opened.

For the present the store is being managed by Sol Arnovitz, Springfield, O., part owner, who announced the present stock will be closed out and that later the store will be equipped with new stock.

JIGGER IS GADGET THAT JIGS UNDER YOUR SKIN

Have you a little jigger in your ankle? Not a gadget. A jigger, a sort of insect. And not a husband, either.

A jigger is an insect of prey. It lays in wait for its victim, pounces on him, bites under the skin, and then the victim prays. That's why it is an insect of prey like a bird of prey.

The jigger is not particular about its victim. It will feast on man or beast. And if the man turns out to be a beast the jigger is just that much happier. It writes home about it. And all its relatives and neighbors come in their dinner suits and with their teeth filed sharp, to feast also.

The jigger is a hairy insect. Under the magnifying glass it looks like Tarzan of the Apes without his spear. The jigger doesn't carry a spear. It just feels like he does. When the jigger attacks he shuts his eyes and bites under the skin. Once under the skin and he finds that beauty is only skin deep, he becomes saddened and stops. But no amount of money will make him come out. He scorns bribes. Like the mayor of Dover.

After the jigger has filled himself perhaps he can't back out through the hole he made going in. So he stays there all the time and has to go to bed without any ice cream and cries himself to sleep. Finally he dies and then he oozes back out of the skin.

There are two ways to avoid jiggers. One is to refrain from all picnic outings in the realm of jiggers and the other to wear a suit of armor and take a jigger bound with you. The jigger bound is a bound whose skin has never been toughened up by flies. The jiggers get on the bound and forget all about you.

If you are unlucky enough to attract a family of jiggers, there are lots of things you can do to get rid of them. You can try rubbing them with kerosene or salt or any of the drug store remedies, or you can rub them with embalming fluid. This embalms the jigger and makes him think he is dead and he comes out. The only trouble with any of these remedies is that none of them work. In that respect they are different from the jigger.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Give us help from trouble: for vain is the help of man. Through God we shall do valiantly: for he it is that shall tread down our enemies.—Psalms, cviii, 12, 13.

WOMEN WHO WASTE LEISURE

The American woman who is wasting her newly gained hours of leisure over the card table, at matinees, in gossip and other time-killing diversions is betraying a responsibility to her family, the nation and herself, in the opinion of Mrs. John F. Sippel, president of the General Federation of Women's clubs.

New hundreds of thousands of women are falling into the category each year, Mrs. Sippel points out in an article written for the current issue of Good Housekeeping magazine. Released from much of the old routine of domestic work by electric labor saving devices, the use of canned pre-cooked foods and other recent innovations, they are casting about for new interests and frequently define leisure as "license to be idle."

"I have heard expressions of pity for drink or drug addicts come from women who themselves were held by bridge or other games in a thrall as any habit that ever drew the victim of drugs or drink out of the orbit of normal human relations," says Mrs. Sippel.

Their new leisure, she declares, is not a license for idleness but an opportunity to better fulfill their duties as homemakers by first learning how to guard or improve the family health, devoting more study to the mental and moral problems of their children, studying their husbands' interests and devising new ways of making their homes happier and brighter.

"I have no objection to cards as seasoning," says Mrs. Sippel. "But I object to them as protein. A measure of play is essential to healthful character and cultural diet. But the woman who indulges in amusements, not for refreshment, but as a time-killing device, is in danger of being destroyed by her own leisure. She will find herself less able day by day to muster her capabilities to meet the opportunities that mark the degree of her success or failure as wife, mother, woman."

Women who dissipate their leisure are even shirking their duty to the nation, Mrs. Sippel says, because it is not through the genius of isolated individuals, but through the increased intelligence of the masses that progress is made in education, science, social and political reforms, or any other phase of life. Wives and mothers, she shows, are in a position to guide and inspire such progress, but only if they have an intelligent understanding of such movements and issues to be obtained through reading.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK, July 13.—Up under the eaves of the Lyceum theatre, behind a wicket presided over by a resourceful gentleman from Cork, is the hide-away of Daniel Frohman, associated with the New York stage for nearly three score years, and grand-daddy of the Actors' Fund of America. Here "Uncle Dan" spends his days, flanked by a shortness waste of photographs of players, gone these many years; playbills of past generations, and manuscripts and books all dealing with the affairs of his beloved theatre.

"Uncle Dan" has given many an eminent player his start in life and if you get him in the right mood he'll pause to salute any number of little memories.

He tells of the night a young actor he engaged to replace J. H. Stoddard, who had refused to open in "A Parisian Romance" because the part wasn't suitable, put over a speech and a fall that made him a star. The young man was Richard Mansfield.

Another young chap played a drunken scene so realistically on the opening night of a new play, "Uncle Dan" thought the man actually was intoxicated and went back stage to remonstrate with him, only to encounter the sober, serious face of E. H. Southern.

About four years ago a dinner was given at the Lambs for "Uncle Dan." It cost $1,000 a plate and there was 100 present. The money went to the Actors' Fund of America.

POWER OF MONEY
"Ladder" Davis, the oil man, who spent a million dollars trying to put a show across on Broadway, and when he couldn't get audiences, gave performances free, has his own ideas as to how life should be lived. He hired a room in the Hotel Belmont on 42nd street, across from the Grand Central station, moved in his land and penates and regarded his housing troubles in the metropolis as ended. But he didn't know his New York. He was notified recently he'd have to pack up and get out as the hotel was going to be sold.

And Davis did what a millionaire with an imagination should do. He bought the hotel himself and he's still residing there, in peace and comfort, as we go to press.

TOO GOOD

The Times Square district is inured to free shows of all sorts and conditions; but the other day there was an innovation staged at the Crossroads pulling a crowd that caused merchants in the neighborhood to yell for the police reserves.

The proprietor of a second-story sporting goods shop in the old Hotel Knickerbocker conceived the bright idea of demonstrating the glories of a one-piece bathing suit for women, with a very much alive and exceedingly attractive model.

Trolley cars slowed down and motorists and conductor gasped. Taxmen halted their pirate craft while they ailed their tonsils. Truckmen slackened their pace, voicing satisfaction in the truckman's history and distinctive fashion. Traffic halted across the curb into the roadway. The young woman in the red tights had a clear conception of her part. It was no place for a minister's son.

The little girl deserved a hand. She got it, but in the wrong place. Someone phoned for the police and the lady was yanked into oblivion.

There's such a thing as being too good.

TAKE WARNING

A man who owns one of those Fray-an-you-enter bungalows on Long Island entered a large sporting goods house to purchase a canoe. The salesman tried to sell him a launch. Finally he left without buying anything.

"I wanted a canoe," said the man. "The salesman got me interested in a launch. Then I became dissatisfied with a canoe and not having enough to get a launch I didn't buy anything!"

THE WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

LIFE'S ANTE-ROOM
How many of us live all our lives in the ante-room! Next year, year after next—sometime, somehow, somewhere—we are going to do the things we want to do. We may be vague about them or we may be definite, but they are things we are going to do after awhile. The normal, reasonable, happy way is to live now—in the present. Don't put off doing the things you are going to do or think you are going to do, some time. If you want to read books some day, organize your time so you can read them now. If you are going to buy something by and by, buy it now, on the installment plan. If you are going to make a long hoped-for trip some vacation, make it this vacation. Don't live all your life in the ante-room. Go on in.

THE HISTORY OF THE CASE
Not long ago a man far enough along in brains and position in the world to be a college teacher confessed that he killed a young woman with a hammer and a knife. We wonder how such a thing could happen. We learn that the woman annoyed him. He quarreled, lost his self-control.

Go back into the history of that man and there is little doubt he would find that through boyhood and young manhood he lacked self-control. He lacked discipline. He was accustomed to get what he wanted and do what he wanted to do. He was not made to behave, he was not subjected to discipline, he knew nothing of self-sacrifice. He built up no habit of self-control. Despite a certain acquired proficiency that enabled him to be a teacher, he had a weak mind and a weak soul. He lacked development. Take the case of almost any criminal, of one who shocks society by his unspeakable behavior. Go into the history of the individual. Go back to boyhood. The habit of self-control was never formed. Temper rode with the wind. It was never controlled, never disciplined. The man never grew up.

DUMB

Strange that even one's selfish instinct doesn't enable him to see that "going straight in the world" is, after all, the easiest way, and pays the best. To do anything else is just to be dumb.

ALL-AMERICAN WATERWAY FAVORED

By FRANK CROWTHER

Congressman From New York
[Frank Crowther was born at Liverpool, Eng., July 10, 1870. He studied at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and was graduated from the Harvard Dental school in 1898. He began his practice of dentistry in Boston in the same year, moving to Perth Amboy, N. J., in 1901 and to Seneca Falls, N. Y., in 1912. From 1905 to 1906 he was a member of the New Jersey house of assembly. In 1919 he was elected to congress from the 30th New York district. He is a Republican.]

Legislation respecting either a St. Lawrence waterway to the Atlantic or an all-American waterway from the Great Lakes to the Hudson probably will be enacted at the next session of congress.

The greatest difficulty that presents itself in the St. Lawrence waterway is to get the co-operation of Canada in this matter. To my mind, the scheme so far outlined as to the St. Lawrence river project is nothing but a water power scheme. The sponsors of the St. Lawrence project are more interested in the question of hydraulic development involved than in furthering the interests of the western states with respect to shipments to and across the ocean and the question of easy access to the market abroad. There is nothing of any definite character as to the future of that waterway project in the declarations that have been made by leaders of the Canadian parliament. I do not see any prospect of action by Canada with respect to treaty finalities that would encourage any plan for a joint United States-Canadian construction of that deeper waterway project connecting the Great Lakes and the ocean.

It will be a great many years before there will be any development of that project, if at all, in my opinion.

We have, however, a feasible and practicable canal proposition that would be all-American and that would be defensible from the standpoint of economic results, patriotism, and national defense. We have the barge canal across New York state, capable of handling 11,000,000 tons each way every year. It can be kept open and traffic maintained through it six weeks longer than would be the case with the St. Lawrence waterway project.

The barge canal has never been used by traffic up to this time with in one-half of its capacity. That canal, properly developed, would take care of all the traffic that would use the St. Lawrence waterway, and practically all the barge canal's present depth. Competent engineers have reported that this canal across the state of New York would be a feasible all-American shipping route without any difficult engineering problems involved in the deepening of the waterway.

It is bitter disappointment when you have seen benefits to reap in justice.—Plautus.

FROM LABOR SHALL COME FORTH REST—Longfellow

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Your mental attitude toward rest and beauty has much to do with your results. When women go to a beauty parlor, tired and discouraged, with skins that are lined and weary—looking, their beauty treatment is outlined and they are established in a comfortable, treatment chair. Then they are told to relax completely, to forget the problems that have troubled them. And, if they must think at all, to think of pleasant things; for example, of how beautiful they will be at the close of the treatment. As deft fingers smooth away all lines and wrinkles and bring back beauty to these tired complexions you can almost see a woman's mind grow freer.

Mental kinks, as well as facial wrinkles, are smoothing out. At the close of the treatment her expression is happier, the corners of her mouth turn up, not down. Her face looks rested, inside and out. Not all of the beauty treatment was in the skillful fingers of the operative, nor in the delightful preparations that she used, however effective they were. Part of it was in the woman's mind.

Beauty of facial expression and the beauty of bodily grace and poise must begin in the mind, first of all. It is true that you can feel happier and fresher when you look your best. But it is also true that you will look better if you can only determine to feel that way.

Keep your mind on rest and beauty. Refuse to worry over old age or death or any of the lesser things that no amount of worrying can help. In the south they tell this story—that no darky ever commits suicide because when he sits down to think about it he falls asleep. We can learn something from this homely, humorous philosophy—or lack of one. If women slept as often as they worry there would be more beauty in the world. Rest and relaxation belong with beauty. Work and play do, too. But not worry. Dismiss such unpleasant things from your mind. Work to overcome them. And rest and relax and grow beautiful.

Behind the Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, July 13.—In referring recently to Senator Reed Smoot's anti-cigarette jeopardy, proclaimed by him just before congress recessed in June, I took it for granted that the Utah lawmaker would like to have his own freedom from the fog habit emphasized.

So, to please him, I went out of my way to explain: "He smokes cigars himself."

Suppose a chronicler were to say of the eighteenth amendment's author:

"Senator Morris Sheppard is an ardent dry. He drinks milk himself."

Is it likely that the Texan would resent it?—even though the statement were made in error—and he could prove that that stuff he was drinking in the senate restaurant the other day was some sort of an artificial emulsion, instead of milk.

When a member of congress practices what he preaches, it is a matter of news these times. Senator Smoot preaches against cigarettes—and eschews them.

Being certain on this point, I order to rub the idea in, I told what I believed he did smoke. It was no snap judgment on my part.

To verify my recollection—for I was pretty sure I had seen the senator with a cigar in his face—I paid a visit to the senate committee room where he was helping to boost the tariff bill—for an actual eye-witness look.

There was the Utah statesman all right. He held occasionally between his fingers, as a kind of talisman, a cigarette, with, at other moments, a cigar. He was puffing on—trying to get hold of it, to pinch and sniff at.

This will be a lesson to me, anyhow—as the condemned murderer remarked just before the executioner sprang the trap. Never again will I identify anything as tobacco, no matter how much I have had a report on it from the bureau of standards.

I also retract my "accusation" against Senator Smoot. He shuns the filthy weed in all its forms.

He gets all the kick he requires out of a fountain pen.

Five Days of Fasting for One Day of Fasting.

Sometime ago I told you about my swearing off on candy and nuts for two and one-half months, until my birthday. Well, I kept my resolution. After lunch on the natal day, I bought a quarter of a pound of the candy I like best (one full of nuts), ate half of it, was completely satisfied, and not having anyone around to give the rest to, threw it away.

It seems a waste to throw away good food, doesn't it. But it is a waste plus damage, if you eat food when you don't need it, so don't ever hesitate to throw!

I want to thank all of you who sent me the gracious birthday greetings. It certainly made me happy to be aware of your kind thoughts of me.

Well, I've lost the seven pounds I gained during my winter vacation (plus the seven more I had in excess before I started!) Every time I have to go through a reducing period, I learn a little something more about the subject. I got several lessons from this season. One was that I could get along without candy and nuts absolutely. (By the way, I must state that after my one indulgence in candy, I've sworn off again for another two months; that is, unless I take them as a dessert and count them as part of my meal. I realize that they will be taboo for me for the rest of my life and I might as well get over my desire for them.)

Another thing I learned is this: It takes five days of fasting to overcome one day of feasting. When I fast, I mean comparative fasting. One Saturday I stepped out, and instead of my usual 1,200 I had $2,800, and part of them as a supper after an evening party. My weight the following morning was four and one-half pounds more than it had been the previous morning. (This, of course, was mostly water retention.) Well, it took me just five days, on an average of 900 calories a day (which is quite low for me), to lose that four and one-half.

Many of those who feel that there must be something the matter with them because their dieting doesn't seem to give results, undoubtedly undo in one or two days of the week all the reducing that has been done the balance of the week. You see, it makes the average number of calories for the week a maintenance or even a gaining number.

I have a friend who has to watch her weight, and after a day of over-eating, she takes a cathartic. That depletes her of much water—

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Do women play fair with each girl. You cannot do anything to make him have faith in you as he had before the other girl told falsehoods, except to be what you seem. Her punishment is that he evidently does not believe her altogether because he still comes to see you, and then deceives her about it.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am in love with a fellow my age, 17. I have been going with him for six months up until last week. Whether he likes me now or not I don't know. I haven't the least idea why he is mad. He made a date with me last week and left word for me he wouldn't be there. He hasn't called me since. The worst of it is I chum with his sister and I like her so well that I can't give her up, too."

"What can I do? I can't go to her house because he is there and will think I am going to see him. Should I go with his sister and try to forgive him, to go to him and ask him why he is mad, or should I leave town with my parents' next week?"

I certainly would be curious enough to try to find out what happened to the boy friend to make him so high hat. You'll leave with your parents just the same, I surmise, but if you can do it, try to find out what struck the young man to make him mad. And there is no reason to give up the friendship with his sister just because he is disgruntled about something.

"DODO." Yes, I'd meet him when he comes, and treat him fairly and make no mention of the other girl.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a young girl of 17. I am deeply in love with a young man one year my senior. I moved from the town in which he lives. In a few weeks, my best girl friend began trying to go with him. She finally succeeded by telling false things about me. He still trusts her, but once in a while he comes to see me, then denies it. I'm sure he's in love with me, and what could I do to regain his love and confidence?"

and some of the food—and she goes down so that her weight doesn't register any higher after her over-eating. But the following day she goes up two pounds or so and then she won't lose anything further for three or four days. The tissues, having been depleted of their needed water, hold on to it more than usual after the depletion. This shows that the loss due to a cathartic is not a true loss. It is certainly not wise to take cathartics habitually, as it ultimately will inflame the intestinal tract and do other damage.

Another thing I learned: I never have cared for saccharin. To me it is a peculiarly unsatisfactory sweetener. But I found that if I used a little less than one-half level teaspoonful of sugar (which would be only 10 C) with the saccharin (one-quarter grain is enough), I didn't notice its unsatisfactory effect. When I take coffee with a muffin or anything unsweetened, I like it as sweet as two level teaspoonsful of sugar (50 C) will make it. While reducing, the one muffin I had for breakfast gave me enough of the carbohydrate foods for the day, so I really

Give us help from trouble; for vain is the help of man. Through God we shall do valiantly; for he it is that shall tread down our enemies.—Psalms, cxviii, 12, 13.

WOMEN WHO WASTE LEISURE

The American woman who is wasting her newly gained hours of leisure over the card table, at matinees, in gossip and other time-killing diversions is betraying a responsibility to her family, the nation and herself, in the opinion of Mrs. John F. Sippel, president of the General Federation of Women's clubs.

New hundreds of thousands of women are falling into the category each year, Mrs. Sippel points out in an article written for the current issue of Good Housekeeping magazine. Released from much of the old routine of domestic work by electric labor saving devices, the use of canned pre-cooked foods and other recent innovations, they are casting about for new interests and frequently define leisure as "license to be idle."

"I have heard expressions of pity for drink or drug addicts come from women who themselves were held by bridge or other games in a thrall as any habit that ever drew the victim of drugs or drink out of the orbit of normal human relations," says Mrs. Sippel.

Their new leisure, she declares, is not a license for idleness but an opportunity to better fulfill their duties as homemakers by first learning how to guard or improve the family health, devoting more study to the mental and moral problems of their children, studying their husbands' interests and devising new ways of making their homes happier and brighter.

"I have no objection to cards as seasoning," says Mrs. Sippel. "But I object to them as protein. A measure of play is essential to healthful character and cultural diet. But the woman who indulges in amusements, not for refreshment, but as a time-killing device, is in danger of being destroyed by her own leisure. She will find herself less able day by day to muster her capabilities to meet the opportunities that mark the degree of her success or failure as wife, mother, woman."

Women who dissipate their leisure are even shirking their duty to the nation, Mrs. Sippel says, because it is not through the genius of isolated individuals, but through the increased intelligence of the masses that progress is made in education, science, social and political reforms, or any other phase of life. Wives and mothers, she shows, are in a position to guide and inspire such progress, but only if they have an intelligent understanding of such movements and issues to be obtained through reading.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK, July 13.—Up under the eaves of the Lyceum theatre, behind a wicket presided over by a resourceful gentleman from Cork, is the hide-away of Daniel Frohman, associated with the New York stage for nearly three score years, and grand-daddy of the Actors' Fund of America. Here "Uncle Dan" spends his days, flanked by a shoreless waste of photographs of players, gone these many years; playbills of past generations, and manuscripts and books all dealing with the affairs of his beloved theatre.

"Uncle Dan" has given many an eminent player his start in life and if you get him in the right mood he'll pause to salute any number of gentle memories.

He tells of the night a young actor he engaged to replace J. H. Stoddard, who had refused to open in "A Parisian Romance" because the part wasn't suitable, put over a speech and a fall that made him a star. The young man was Richard Mansfield.

Another young chap played a drunken scene so realistically on the opening night of a new play, "Uncle Dan" thought the man actually was intoxicated and went back stage to remonstrate with him, only to encounter the sober, serious face of E. H. Sothern.

About four years ago a dinner was given at the Lambs for "Uncle Dan." It cost $1,000 a plate and there was 100 present. The money went to the Actors' Fund of America.

"Ladder" Davis, the oil man, who spent a million dollars trying to put a show across on Broadway, and when he couldn't get audiences, gave performances free, has his own ideas as to how life should be lived.

The Times Square district is insured to free shows of all sorts and conditions; but the other day there was an innovation staged at the Crossroads pulling a crowd that caused merchants in the neighborhood to yell for the police reserves.

The proprietor of a second-story sporting goods shop in the old Hotel Knickerbocker conceived the bright idea of demonstrating the glories of a one-piece bathing suit for women, with a very much alive and exceedingly attractive model.

Truckmen slackened their pace, voicing satisfaction in the truckman's historic and distinctive fashion. Traffic bulged across the curb into the roadway. The young woman in the red tights had a clear conception of her part. It was no place for a minor's son.

The little girl deserved a hand. She got it, but in the wrong place. Someone phoned for the police and the lady was yanked into oblivion. There's such a thing as being too good.

He was accustomed to get what he wanted and do what he wanted to do. He was not made to behave, he was not subjected to discipline, he knew nothing of self-sacrifice. He built up no habit of self-control. Despite a certain acquired proficiency that enabled him to be a teacher, he had a weak mind and a weak soul. He lacked development.

Take the case of almost any criminal, of one who shocks society by his unspeakable behavior. Go into the history of the individual. Go back to boyhood. The habit of self-control was never formed. Temper rode with the wind. It was never controlled, never disciplined. The man never grew up.

DUMB

Strange that even one's selfish instinct doesn't enable him to see that "going straight in the world" is, after all, the easiest way, and pays the best. To do anything else is just to be dumb.

ALL-AMERICAN WATERWAY FAVORED

By FRANK CROWTHER

Congressman From New York

Frank Crowther was born at Liverpool, Eng., July 10, 1870. He studied at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and was graduated from the Harvard Dental school in 1898. He began his practice of dentistry in Boston in the same year, moving to Perth Amboy, N. J., in 1901 and to Seneca Falls, N. Y., in 1912. From 1905 to 1906 he was a member of the New Jersey house of assembly. In 1919 he was elected to congress from the 39th New York district. He is a Republican.

Legislation respecting either a St. Lawrence waterway to the Atlantic or an all-American waterway from the Great Lakes to the Hudson probably will not be enacted at the next session of congress.

The greatest difficulty that presents itself in the St. Lawrence waterway is to get the co-operation of Canada in this matter. To my mind, the scheme so far outlined as to the St. Lawrence river project is nothing but a water power scheme. The sponsors of the St. Lawrence project are more interested in the question of hydraulic development involved than in furthering the interests of the western states with respect to shipments to and across the ocean, and the question of easy access to the markets abroad. There is nothing of any definite character as to the future of that waterway project in the declarations that have been made by leaders of the Canadian parliament. I do not see any prospect of action by Canada with respect to treaty finalities that would encourage any plan for a joint United States-Canadian construction of that deeper waterway project connecting the Great Lakes and the ocean.

It will be a great many years before there will be any development of that project, if at all, in my opinion.

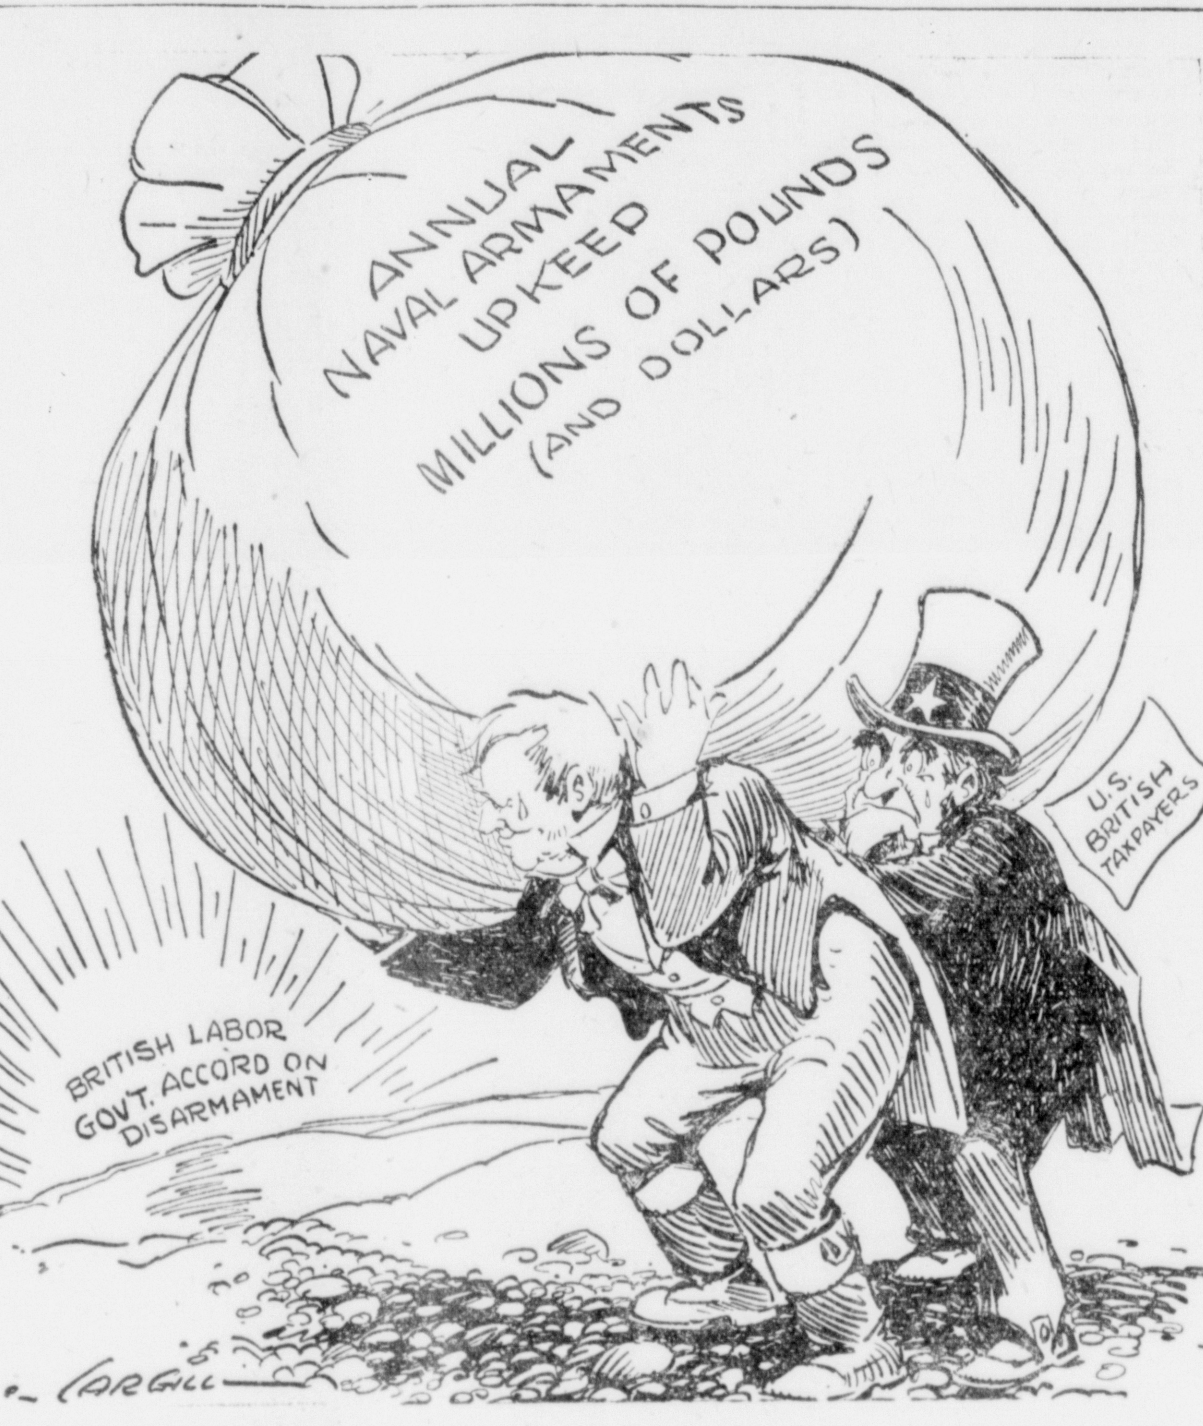

We have, however, a feasible and practicable canal proposition that would be all-American and that would be defensible from the standpoint of economic results, patriotism, and national defense. We have the barge canal across New York state, capable of handling 11,000,000 tons each way every year. It can be kept open and traffic maintained through it six weeks longer than would be the case with the St. Lawrence waterway project.

The barge canal has never been used by traffic up to this time with one-half of its capacity. That canal, properly developed, would take care of all the traffic that would use the St. Lawrence waterway, and practically all the barge canal's present depth. Competent engineers have reported that this canal across the state of New York would be a feasible all-American shipping route without any difficult engineering problems involved in the deepening of the waterway.

There is bitter disappointment when you have seen benefits to reap in the future.

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Your mental attitude toward rest and beauty has much to do with your results. When women go to a beauty parlor, tired and discouraged, with skins that are lined and weary—looking, their beauty treatment is outlined and they are established in a comfortable, treatment chair. Then they are told to relax completely, to forget the problems that have troubled them. And, if they must think at all, to think of pleasant things; for example, of how beautiful they will be at the close of the treatment. As deft fingers smooth away all lines and wrinkles and bring back beauty to these tired complexions you can almost see a woman's mind grow freer.

Mental kinks as well as facial wrinkles, are smoothing out. At the close of the treatment her expression is happier, the corners of her mouth turn up, not down. Her face looks rested, inside and out. Not all of the beauty treatment was in the skillful fingers of the operative, nor in the delightful preparations that she used, however effective they were. Part of it was in the woman's mind.

Beauty of facial expression and the beauty of bodily grace and poise must begin in the mind, first of all. It is true that you can feel happier and fresher when you look your best. But it is also true that you will look better if you can only determine to feel that way.

Keep your mind on rest and beauty. Refuse to worry over old age or death or any of the lesser things that no amount of worrying can help. In the south they tell this story—that no daisy ever commits suicide because when he sits down to think about it he falls asleep. We can learn something from this story—that no daisy ever commits suicide because when he sits down to think about it he falls asleep. We can learn something from this story—that no daisy ever commits suicide because when he sits down to think about it he falls asleep.

Behind the Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, July 13.—In referring recently to Senator Reed Smoot's anti-cigarette jehad, proclaimed by him just before congress recessed in June, I took it for granted that the Utah lawmaker would like to have his own freedom from the fog habit emphasized.

So, to please him, I went out of my way to explain: "He smokes cigars himself."

Suppose a chronicler were to say of the eighteenth amendment's author: "Senator Morris Sheppard is an ardent dry. He drinks milk himself."

Is it likely that the Texan would resent it?—even though the statement were made in error—and he could prove that that stuff he was drinking in the senate restaurant the other day was some sort of an artificial emulsion, instead of milk.

When a member of congress practices what he preaches, it is a matter of news these times.

Senator Smoot preaches against cigarettes—and eschews them.

Being certain on this point, I order to rub the idea in, I told what I believed he did smoke.

It was no snap judgment on my part.

To verify my recollection—for I was pretty sure I had seen the senator with a cigar in his face—I paid a visit to the senate finance committee room where he was helping to boost the tariff bill—for an actual eye-witness look.

There was the Utah statesman all right.

Held occasionally between his fingers, as a kind of bait to gesticulate with, at other moments gripped between his teeth or shifting from corner to corner of his mouth, precisely like a cigar, was what I will guarantee that anyone would have taken, from where I sat, to be a long, black panatella.

Comes now a spokesman from the Mormon legislature, and assures me that it was the butt end of a fountain pen which Senator Smoot was chewing on.

His spokesman denies that the senator uses the weed in any form.

Very well; I accept his spokesman's word for it.

The senator was a crowded roomful distant from me. The haze of tobacco smoke made the light poor anyway. Say I was mistaken.

What of it?

"Why," answers the senator's secretary, "you accuse him of smoking cigars."

Accuse him!

Would he call it an accusation to have it said of him that he eats three meals a day?—when it may be that he gets along on two?

However, "evil to him that evil thinks,"

Since the senator thinks so evilly of cigar smoking, no doubt the statement that he smokes them does amount to an accusation according to his lights.

I always knew that cigarette smoking was wicked.

That notion was inculcated in my mind at an early age. Cigarettes were generally so regarded then. It was thus that I acquired the habit.

But cigar smoking!

I never suspected that any but very, very few cranks considered the proper destination for users of tobacco in that

Of course if I had realized what I was getting into I would have had a pair of opera glasses with me at that tariff hearing—and looked carefully through them at whatever it was that Senator appeared to be puffing on—and tried to get hold of it, to pinch and sniff at it.

This will be a lesson to me, anyhow—as the condemned murderer remarked just before the executioner sprang the trap.

Never again will I identify anything as tobacco, no matter how much it may look like it, until I have had a report on it from the bureau of standards.

I also retract my "accusation" against Senator Smoot.

He chews the filthy weed in all its forms.

He gets all the kick he requires out of a fountain pen.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

Five Days of Fasting for One Day of Feasting

Sometime ago I told you about my swearing off on candy and nuts for two and one-half months, until my birthday. Well, I kept my resolution. After lunch on the natal day, I bought a quarter of a pound of the candy I like best (one full of nuts), ate half of it, was completely satisfied, and not having anyone around to give the rest to, threw it away.

It seems a waste to throw away good food, doesn't it? But it is a waste plus damage, if you eat food when you don't need it, so don't ever hesitate to throw it!

I want to thank all of you who sent me the gracious birthday greetings. It certainly made me happy to be aware of your kind thoughts of me.

Well, I've lost the seven pounds I gained during my winter vacation (plus the seven more I had in excess before I started!). Every time I have to go through a reducing period, I learn a little something more about the subject. I got several lessons from this session. One was that I could get along without candy and nuts absolutely. (By the way, I must state that after my one indulgence in candy, I've sworn off again for another two months; that is, unless I take them as a dessert and count them as part of my meal. I realize that they will be taboo for me for the rest of my life and I might as well get over my desire for them.)

Another thing I learned is this: It takes five days of fasting to overcome one day of feasting; when I say fasting, I mean comparative fasting. One Saturday I stepped out, and instead of my usual 1,200 I had $2,800, and part of them as a supper after an evening party. My weight the following morning was four and one-half pounds more than it had been the previous morning. (This, of course, was mostly water retention). Well, it took me just five days, on an average of 900 calories a day (which is quite low for me), to lose that four and one-half

Many of those who feel that there must be something the matter with them because their dieting doesn't seem to give results, undoubtedly undo in one or two days of the week all the reducing that has been done the balance of the week. You see, it makes the average number of calories for the week a maintenance or even a gaining number.

I have a friend who has to watch her weight, and after a day of over-eating, she takes a cathartic. That depletes her of much water—and some of the food—and she goes down so that her weight doesn't register any higher after her over-eating. But the following day she goes up two pounds or so and then she won't lose anything further for three or four days. The tissues, having been depleted of their needed water, hold on to it more than usual after the depletion. This shows that the loss due to a cathartic is not all a true loss. It is certainly not wise to take cathartics habitually; it ultimately will inflame the intestinal tract and do other damage.

Another thing I learned: I never have cared for saccharin. To me it is a peculiarly unsatisfactory sweetener. But I found that if I used a little less than one-half level teaspoonful of sugar (which would be only 10 C) with the saccharin (one-quarter grain is enough), I didn't notice its unsatisfactory effect. When I take coffee with a muffin or anything unsweetened, I like it as sweet as two level teaspoonfuls of sugar (50 C) will make it. While reducing, the one muffin I had for breakfast gave me enough frankly carbohydrate foods for the day, so I really didn't need this 50 C of sugar. By using the saccharin, I cut out 40 C, which I could apply to a goodly portion of the needed vegetables. I found that tea sweetened with saccharin and 10 C of sugar, and the juice of one-half lemon (about 10 C) makes a very satisfactory drink, also. (One or two grains a day is permissible.)

Still another thing I did was to make each Friday a low calorie day, not over 600 C. As I count my weight from Saturday to Saturday (One Friday, because of an indiscretion, I had to go as low as 400 C).

Well, it's off! I don't think I personally need to know anything more about reducing. I have resolved that hereafter when my scales register three pounds more than normal, me for a very low calorie day immediately.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Do women play fair with each other or are we the cats we are supposed to be? Do we pat one another with silken paws when we face to face, and scratch viciously when a back is turned?

Generally speaking, I've found women just as fair as men. In fact I've come to the conclusion that back biting and under-handed actions are just traits of some kinds of humans of both sexes.

Many people seem to think that while their code calls for actions open and above board in ordinary transactions, "all's fair in love and war." It's not, of course. A cruel and cowardly thing is just as cruel and cowardly when done to win love as it is to win business. "Fair play's a jewel," always.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a young girl of 17. I am deeply in love with a young man one year my senior. I moved from the town in which he lives. In a few weeks my best girl friend began trying to go with him. She finally succeeded by telling false things about me. He still trusts her, but once in a while he comes to see me, then denies it to this girl. Should I meet him when he comes, and what could I do to regain his love and confidence?"

"DODO."

Yes, I'd meet him when he comes, and treat him fairly and make no mention of the other

"What can I do? I can't go to her house because he is there and will think I am going to see him. Should I go with his sister and try to forget him, go to him and ask him why he is mad, or should I leave town with my parents next week?"

DUTY.

I certainly try to find out what happened to the boy friend to make him so high hat. You'll leave with your parents just the same, I surmise, but if you can do it, do try to find out what struck the young man to make him mad. And there is no reason to give up the friendship with his sister just because he is disgruntled about something.

Peter's Adventures

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

NURSIE DEFIES HER MAJESTY

"Your Highness, I do not at all approve of allowing this strange creature to run around loose in our home town!" buzzed the funny fat bee who had waddled to the foot of the throne. "You ought to know better!"

Peter couldn't believe his ears. A commoner to speak so familiarly to royalty! He half expected to hear Her Majesty order "Off with her head!" (For Peter had an idea that this was what all Kings and Queens did when their subjects did anything to displease them—at least this was what he had been given to understand in the books he had read.) And the boy began to feel very sorry for the funny fat bee in spite of the fact she had spoken a word against him. She did look rather old and pathetic, and somehow her voice sounded familiar. Where had he heard it before? The boy could not puzzle it out.

Much to his surprise, however, the beautiful Queen didn't seem to mind the funny fat bee's impudence at all.

"Why shouldn't we be kind to the stranger in our midst and allow him to wander about as he likes?" asked she, in her gentle voice. "What harm could he do us even if he wished to, and I am sure he doesn't, Nursie?"

A third bee buzzed over Peter's shoulder, and turning, the boy recognized the excited bee who first had taken him for a thief and called for help.

"He was in the storehouse passage, Your Highness, and he had no business there!" buzzed this persistent accuser.

"Exactly! That's precisely what I think!" agreed the funny fat bee whom the Queen had called Nursie. "The whole thing appears very suspicious to me. I for one think this intruder is up to no good and that he should be forcibly prevented from doing any damage."

"Why, Nursie, I can't imagine what has come over you," remarked the Queen, slowly, and Peter realized that Her Majesty was very much surprised at Nursie's manner. "It is not like you to act nor to talk like this. You are the kindest, heartiest little creature in the world. Never in all my life, since the days when you took care of me, a wee baby, have I seen you so cross before."

The Cincinnati Reds, who apparently have a strange hold on last place in the National League race, need more hitting from the wrong side of the plate.

Take this from Charley Murphy, former owner of the Chicago Cubs, who is visiting in his former home of Wilmington and while there, authored a dope story for the Wilmington News-Journal.

Murphy thinks the Reds have the best pitching staff in either major league and rates Jack Hendricks as a capable manager but he maintains that any club that expects to get anywhere in a major league race, cannot do it with only one left-hand batsman and eight right-handed hitters.

"That is a jug-handled lineup," says Murphy. He admits that most of the time the Cubs only have one southpaw hitter, Charley Grimm, in the lineup, but points out that the other Cub hitters help the team to win through pure force.

On the other hand he points to Terry, Roush, Ott and Leach of the Giants, making a perfect batting order; to Lloyd and Paul Waner and George Ghrisani of the Pirates, to Cochran, Haas and Bishop of the Athletics and Ruth, Gehrig and Combs of the Yankees. Several other clubs with the same kind of hitting are not winning games because their pitching is poor.

"Now you give the Reds a couple of left-hand batters in the outfield and a young left-hand first baseman to support those pitchers and it would be like administering oxygen to a dying person. Then the Reds would no longer be almost helpless against right-hand curve ball pitching. That is my remedy for the Reds," says Murphy.

"The Reds need batting. That was known on the opening day of the season—and it is true now. If the scouts can find 'em, why not get new scouts? Other clubs get them and so can the Reds. They must if they are to hold the affection and esteem of all the fans in Ohio's southern portion as well as followers of the game elsewhere in the territory contiguous to dear old Cincinnati."

BLUEHEARTS DEFEAT ROTARY NINE IN AMERICAN LOOP TILT

The league-leading Hooven and Allison Co. "Blue Hearts" collected twenty-one hits to defeat the crippled Rotary nine, 15 to 9 in a free-hitting American League game Monday night at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

Handcapped by the loss of Russ Kimber, its regular pitcher, who fractured a bone in his left ankle while sliding into a base in a recent game, the Rotary team fought a game but losing battle.

The league-leaders assaulted Stout, Rotary's hurler, for five runs in the second and third innings but Rotary rallied to score twice in the third round and six more runs in the fifth, making the H. and A. victory anything but a walkaway.

Williams, H. and A. twirler, was nipped for thirteen hits and every member of the Rotary team hit safely at least once. N. Murrell, D. Kersey and D. Finlay were the heavy hitters for the winners, each punching out four hits. D. Kersey and Finlay each knocked home runs.

Harness Cigars and Xenia Central High will play a National League game Tuesday night.

Two boys who escaped from the corridor of the Jamestown jail following their arrest Monday morning for the theft of a sedan owned by Carl E. Fent, Jamestown bus line operator, were still at large Tuesday, despite an intensive search conducted by county authorities.

The car in which the pair drove into Jamestown at 2 a. m. Monday ran out of gasoline at the entrance to the village cemetery. Entering the village, they stole a car parked in front of Fent's residence. Fent and John Baughn, village marshal, gave chase and captured the youths at the edge of the village when they experienced trouble in operating the machine.

Marshal Baughn returned them to Jamestown and locked them up in the jail corridor. Returning thirty minutes later he discovered the prisoners had picked a lock on the corridor door and escaped.

Three of six youths who were later seen to board a freight train bound for Xenia were apprehended by county authorities but were released when their description failed to tally with those of the two boys sought.

POST OFFICE TEAM DEFEATS IDLE HOUR IN OVERTIME TILT

The Post Office nine, second-placers in the American Softball League, went ten innings to defeat the Idle Hour Club, a strong colored team, by a score of 8 to 7 in a non-league game at Washington Park Monday night.

Outbatted, the mailmen took advantage of every opportunity to score and pushed over the winning run in the tenth. The Idle Hour nine put on a two-run rally in the ninth, but the Post Office tied up the count in the last half of the round.

The winners were out-hit, fourteen blows to seven, but Downey, pitcher for the postal team, kept the opposing nine's hits well scattered. Downey also led his team at bat with three bingles. Harris pitched for the losers but received poor support, the Idle Hour team making eight errors which figured in the scoring to a large extent. Anderson with three hits was the batting star for the losing team.

Pittsburgh scored its seventh consecutive victory of the Pirates' eastern tour by beating the Braves at Boston, 5 to 4. The Pirates were able to get only seven hits off Brandt but made them effective.

The Chicago Cubs gained half a game on the Pirates by winning two games at Philadelphia, 9 to 6 and 7 to 6. In both games the Cubs were out-hit, 15 to 12 in the first and 11 to 8 in the second.

Jack Scott held the St. Louis Cardinals to seven hits while the Giants pounded Willie Sherdel for thirteen safe blows and a 7 to 2 victory at New York.

Babe Ruth hit a home run with the score tied in the ninth inning at Detroit and the New York Yankees beat the Tigers, 7 to 6. The victory enabled the Yanks to gain half a game on the leading A's who split a double header at Cleveland.

Cleveland pounded Ehmke, Rommel and Yerkes for fifteen hits to win the first game from Philadelphia, 8 to 5. In the second game, however, Earnshaw scattered seven hits among the Indians with such success that not a Cleveland runner crossed the plate and Philadelphia won, 4 to 0.

Young Ed Walsh pitched an 8-hit game for the White Sox, at Chicago, and scored a 4 to 2 victory over Washington. The White Sox made only seven hits off Marberry and Liske.

St. Louis romped to an easy 10 to 3 victory over the Boston Red Sox, at St. Louis. Stewart pitched for the winners, allowing seven hits.

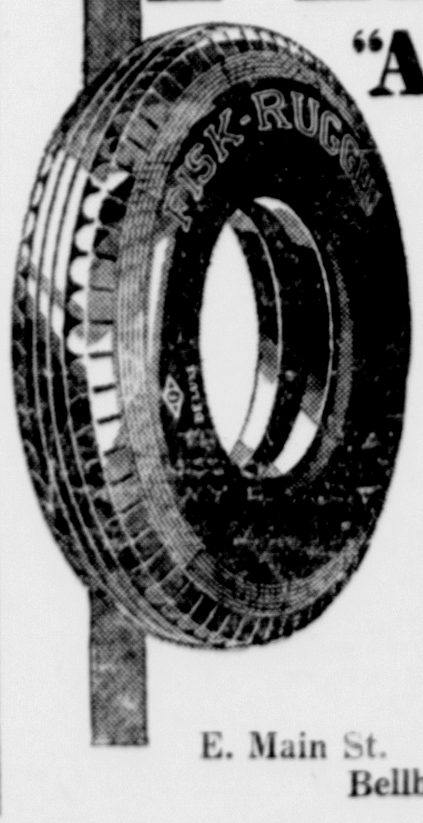

MIDDLETOWN GOLF MATCH WEDNESDAY

Middletown is expected to send a large delegation of members to Xenia Wednesday afternoon for an inter-city golf match with the Xenia Country Club, an eighteen-hole match to be contested over the local nine-hole course.

It will be Xenia's second match. Local golfers lost to the Snow Hill Country Club at Wilmington two weeks ago and hope to retrieve lost prestige at the expense of Middletown, which is expected to be a difficult assignment since Wilmington was overwhelmingly defeated by Middletown a week ago.

As many local members as possible are being urged to participate in the match, which will be followed by dinner served the players at the clubhouse.

Several other clubs with the same kind of hitting are not winning games because their pitching is poor.

"Now you give the Reds a couple of left-hand batters in the outfield and a young left-hand first baseman to support those pitchers and it would be like administering oxygen to a dying person. Then the Reds would no longer be almost helpless against right-hand curve ball pitching. That is my remedy for the Reds," says Murphy.

"The Reds need batting. That was known on the opening day of the season—and it is true now. If the scouts can find 'em, why not get new scouts? Other clubs get them and so can the Reds. They must if they are to hold the affection and esteem of all the fans in Ohio's southern portion as well as followers of the game elsewhere in the territory contiguous to dear old Cincinnati."

BLUEHEARTS DEFEAT ROTARY NINE IN AMERICAN LOOP TILT

The league-leading Hooven and Allison Co. "Blue Hearts" collected twenty-one hits to defeat the crippled Rotary nine, 15 to 9 in a free-hitting American League game Monday night at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

Handicapped by the loss of Russ Kimber, its regular pitcher, who fractured a bone in his left ankle while sliding into a base in a recent game, the Rotary team fought a game but losing battle.

The league-leaders assaulted Stout, Rotary hurler, for five runs in the second and third innings but Rotary rallied to score twice in the third round and six more runs in the fifth, making the H. and A. victory anything but a walkaway.

Williams, H. and A. twirler, was nipped for thirteen hits and every member of the Rotary team hit safely at least once. N. Murrell, D. Kersey and D. Finlay were the heavy sluggers for the winners, each punching out four hits. D. Kersey and Finlay each knocked home runs.

PAIR WHO ESCAPED JAIL AT JAMESTOWN REMAIN AT LARGE

Two boys who escaped from the corridor of the Jamestown jail following their arrest Monday morning for the theft of a sedan owned by Carl E. Fent, Jamestown bus line operator, were still at large Tuesday, despite an intensive search conducted by county authorities.

The car in which the pair drove into Jamestown at 2 a. m. Monday ran out of gasoline at the entrance to the village cemetery. Entering the village, they stole a car parked in front of Fent's residence. Fent and John Baughn, village marshal, gave chase and captured the youths at the edge of the village when they experienced trouble in operating the machine.

Marshal Baughn returned them to Jamestown and locked them up in the jail corridor. Returning thirty minutes later he discovered the prisoners had picked a lock on the corridor door and escaped.

Three of six youths who were later seen to board a freight train bound for Xenia were apprehended by county authorities but were released when their description failed to tally with those of the two boys sought.

POST OFFICE TEAM DEFEATS IDLE HOUR IN OVERTIME TILT

The Post Office nine, second place in the American Softball League, went ten innings to defeat the Idle Hour Club, a strong colored team, by a score of 8 to 7 in a non-league game at Washington Park Monday night.

Outbatted, the mailmen took advantage of every opportunity to score and pushed over the winning run in the tenth. The Idle Hour nine put on a two-run rally in the ninth, but the Post Office tied up the count in the last half of the round.

The winners were outbatted, fourteen blows to seven, but Downey, pitcher for the postal team, kept the opposing nine's hits well scattered. Downey also led his team at bat with three bingles. Harris pitched for the losers but received making eight errors which figured in the scoring to a large extent.

Anderson with three hits was the batting star for the losing team.

BROOKLYN PITCHER SUBDUES REDS AND CINCINNATI LOSES

Yesterday's hero: William Watson Clark who held Cincinnati to four hits and won his third consecutive victory for the Robins at Brooklyn, 4 to 2. It was the finest pitching performance of the day.

Pittsburgh scored its seventh consecutive victory of the Pirates' eastern tour by beating the Braves at Boston, 5 to 4. The Pirates were able to get only seven hits off Brandt but made them effective.

The Chicago Cubs gained half a game on the Pirates by winning two games at Philadelphia, 3 to 6 and 7 to 6. In both games the Cubs were outbatted, 15 to 12 in the first and 11 to 8 in the second. Chuck Klein of the Phils hit three home runs.

Jack Scott held the St. Louis Cardinals to seven hits while the Giants pounded Willie Sherdel for thirteen safe blows and a 7 to 2 victory at New York.

Babe Ruth hit a home run with the score tied in the ninth inning at Detroit and the New York Yankees beat the Tigers, 7 to 6. The victory enabled the Yanks to gain half a game on the leading A's who split a double header at Cleveland.

Cleveland pounded Ehmke, Rommel and Yerkes for fifteen hits to win the first game from Philadelphia, 8 to 5. In the second game, however, Earnshaw scattered seven hits among the Indians with such success that not a Cleveland runner crossed the plate and Philadelphia won, 4 to 0.

Young Ed Walsh pitched an 8-hit game for the White Sox, at Chicago, and scored a 4 to 2 victory over Washington. The White Sox made only seven hits off Marberry and Liske.

St. Louis romped to an easy 10 to 3 victory over the Boston Red Sox, at St. Louis. Stewart pitched for the winners, allowing seven hits.

MIDDLETOWN GOLF MATCH WEDNESDAY

Middletown is expected to send a large delegation of members to Xenia Wednesday afternoon for an inter-city golf match with the Xenia Country Club, an eighteen-hole match to be contested over the local nine-hole course.

It will be Xenia's second match. Local golfers lost to the Snow Hill Country Club at Wilmington two weeks ago and hope to retrieve lost prestige at the expense of Middletown, which is expected to be a difficult assignment since Wilmington was overwhelmingly defeated by Middletown a week ago.

As many local members as possible are being urged to participate in the match, which will be followed by dinner served the players at the clubhouse.

THIRTY APPLY FOR YELLOW SPRINGS SCHOOL POSITION

The position of superintendent of Yellow Springs schools is in great demand.

No less than thirty applications for the post are being considered by the Miami Two, board of education, which is now in full control of school affairs in both the township and village, according to Alton Huston, president of the township board.

Although electors of the Yellow Springs village school district by an overwhelming majority, voted at a special election last July 9 to dissolve the village district and join the contiguous Miami Two district, the township board will be unable to legally proceed with the employment of a new superintendent until the village board, automatically abolished by the election, holds a meeting and declares itself no longer in existence.

Under the law, this meeting is scheduled to be held next Monday night. It is probable a joint meeting will be held with the township board. The books of the village district will be turned over to the township board, and the latter board may then proceed with authority to appoint a new superintendent to succeed Ninde Wilder, resigned, it is announced.

THE FLAT TIRE

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY, AUTHOR OF "MAKE UP" ETC.

A DRAB LITTLE MOTH FLIES TO HAPPINESS

READ THIS FIRST:

Vivian Matthews, the town "flat tire," shy and unhappy, enters into a marriage compact with Kentworth Hillman Johns III, wherein she is to receive one hundred thousand dollars, and a divorce in Paris at the end of the year. He marries her because he has been jilted by "Dovie" Jansen, and to get his grandfather's fortune. Mann Barkow, famous illustrator, files from New York to paint Vivian, and teaches her to fly. On the day the painting receives first international art prize, her old guardian, Martha Matthews, on whose doorstep she was found, dies, trying to tell her something. The night after the funeral a storm comes up. They rush to the cave, and when Kent leaves to warn "Dovie" and her mother, Vivian starts after him. Celeste pushes her back and is injured. The town is swept with a cyclone. Vivian realizes they must have doctors.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVI

A little sob of joy escaped Vivian when she reached Barkow's place through the storm, and saw in the dim light that his house and hangar were still there.

She saw a light and made her way cautiously to the window and peered in. Thank God he was safe! She saw him in his bathrobe and slippers, pacing the living room. Then she stole around the house and to the hangar.

The wind was blowing in another direction, so that Bark did not hear Vivian when, with unbelievable strength, she got the plane out of the shelter and started it. The rain was pouring down—the aftermath of the cyclone, and Vivian decided she could never make the trip in the little plane.

She was sure Bark wouldn't care if she took his cabin plane. It was the only way she could bring back two doctors and supplies. She must have at least two. But would they come? Would they risk it? Of course, she realized then, doctors would risk anything for the suffering.

It took all of Vivian's strength and ability to get the plane going. It she hadn't been so determined in the emergency there is little doubt she would have "cracked up" on the take-off.

There was no fear in her heart for her own safety. She felt as though her spirit had left her body and she were floating in space. Lightning flashed incessantly, turning the inky blackness into day. It seemed almost certain that she might be struck. How thankful she was that she had flown to Salina so often!

She glanced at her wrist watch, and saw that it was only a little after twelve o'clock. She thought how quickly tragedy had come to her, leaving in its wake death and ruin. Life seemed a very big thing to her then. How petty all her own little worries looked through the eyes of a night of such horror.

Poor little Celeste! If she died it would break her heart. She was unworthy of a friend so loyal and dear as the little French maid had been.

Fighting the wind and the rain with her teeth bared in determination, Vivian's thoughts wandered crazily from one thing to another until she was hardly conscious that the storm was getting so much worse. The plane bobbed about like a cork, and turned almost completely over, bringing her to her senses again.

The wind was howling around her like a million devils. It came from the side, and it became harder and harder to go on.

"Oh, God, help! Help me—poor little Celeste," she prayed wildly.

Perhaps if she went around a little to the north she might avoid the worst part of the storm. After she went two miles out of her way it seemed worse.

Then it began to hail. Large pieces of ice, like stones, beat against the cabin like hammer blows, and the air suddenly began to get colder, and Vivian froze with horror when she saw how the sleet was collecting on the wings. It might force her down!

It was pitch black, except for the lightning flashes, and if she had to make a forced landing, God only knew where it would be. In going around to keep out of the storm, she had lost her sense of direction, and she realized that she was flying aimlessly about, getting nowhere.

She was flying high, trying to get above the storm clouds, if possible. But she knew she would have to drop down a little soon and look for some landmark. Gliding down, she banked the ship over and peered with eager eyes through the black night. A blinding lightning flash came, and she gave a glad cry. She was directly over a water tower a few miles from the town. If she kept on a straight path she would soon be there.

A landing place had never occurred to her. She racked her brain for a possible place that would serve this purpose. Then she saw the lights of the city. Tears of thankfulness came to her eyes. God had heard her prayers, after all.

Salina had not been touched by the storm—except for the wind and rain. Vivian circled above the lights, and strained her eyes for a landing place. A great flash showed an outlying farm, and she saw that there was space between the barn and the house for a landing. It was just on the outskirts of the city.

To the longest day she lived, Vivian would not be able to tell how she made the landing in the narrow, mud-filled barnyard. It was a miracle! Just as she got through the storm safely, she found herself thanking God over and over again, as she felt the earth under her feet, and stumbled ahead to the house.

She made her way to the front door and rang the bell. A moment later a head was thrust from an upstairs window and a man's voice asked who was there.

"It is Mrs. Kent Johns from Bender. We have had a cyclone. The town is in ruins. Will you come down, please?"

It seemed no more than a half minute until the door was flung open. The farmer stared wild-eyed at the rain-soaked girl in the torn white skirt and tan blouse.

"How—how did you get here?" "Flew over," Vivian pointed to her plane, but he could not see it. He stared at her, unbelievably, and she had to explain it over and over again to him. "My airplane—it is in the yard. There are many injured. I must get at least two doctors and some supplies. Can we phone from here?"

The farmer, still dazed, was joined by his wife. She asked Vivian to come in, and wrapped a coat around her. Before the farmer would believe that she was not insane, he went out in the yard and saw the plane himself.

"Well, I'll be hornswoggled!" He shook his head at the idiosyncrasies of human nature, and returned to the house to phone the hospital.

Vivian took the phone and explained her errand to the superintendent. She waited about five minutes before she heard the voice again on the phone.

"Yes. Two doctors will start right away—and I've notified the Red Cross. They will start out immediately. The doctors will meet you at the Winton farm."

The voice was official and curt. Vivian sighed with relief, and turned to the farmer.

"Have you a pair of overalls you can loan me to wear back? A dress is hard to manage in a plane." His wife went for them, and when she had gone the farmer grunted at Vivian:

"If you're men girl you wouldn't have one of them darn things flyin' around in the air. You'll break your fool neck, that's what you'll be doin'."

Vivian smiled at him wanly. "My maid—and many of my old friends—are injured and may be dying. What other way in the world would there have been to get here in less than an hour, as I have, except by flying?"

"Where's your husband, he hurt, too?" he asked, bluntly. "My husband doesn't know I came. He probably wonders where I am."

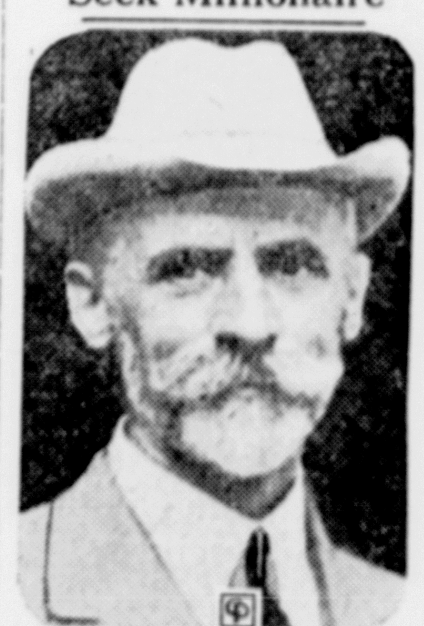

Vivian put on the overalls and an old coat, and waited impatiently for the doctors to arrive. Half an hour later a car drove into the yard, and two excited physicians jumped from it.

"My God, a little girl," one of them exclaimed, when Vivian ran toward them and pointed to her plane.

"You're not afraid, are you?" she asked them, grimly. And the younger replied for both:

"Where to, sister?" (TO BE CONTINUED)

THIRTY APPLY FOR YELLOW SPRINGS SCHOOL POSITION

The position of superintendent of Yellow Springs schools is in great demand.

No less than thirty applications for the post are being considered by the Miami Twp. board of education, which is now in full control of school affairs in both the township and village, according to Alton Huston, president of the township board.

Although electors of the Yellow Springs village school district by an overwhelming majority, voted at a special election last July 9 to dissolve the village district and join the contiguous Miami Twp. district, the township board will be unable to legally proceed with the employment of a new superintendent until the village board, automatically abolished by the election, holds a meeting and declares itself no longer in existence.

Under the law, this meeting is scheduled to be held next Monday night. It is probable a joint meeting will be held with the township board. The books of the village district will be turned over to the township board, and the latter board may then proceed with authority to appoint a new superintendent to succeed Nide Wilder, resigned, it is announced.

READ THIS FIRST:

Vivian Matthews, the town "flat tire," shy and unhappy, enters into a marriage compact with Kentworth Hillman Johns III, wherein she is to receive one hundred thousand dollars, and a divorce in Paris at the end of the year. He marries her because he has been jilted by "Dovie" Jansen, and to get his grandfather's fortune. Mann Barkow, famous illustrator, flies from New York to paint Vivian, and teaches her to fly. On the day the painting receives first international art prize, her old guardian, Martha Matthews, on whose doorstep she was found, dies, trying to tell her something. The night after the funeral a storm comes up. They rush to the cave, and when Kent leaves to warn "Dovie" and her mother, Vivian starts after him. Celeste pushes her back and is injured. The town is swept with a cyclone. Vivian realizes they must have doctors.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVI

A little sob of joy escaped Vivian when she reached Barkow's place through the storm, and saw in the dim light that his house and hangar were still there.

She saw a light and made her way cautiously to the window and peered in. "Thank God he was safe!" She saw him in his bathrobe and slippers, pacing the living room. Then she stole around the house and to the hangar.

The wind was blowing in another direction, so that Bark did not hear Vivian when, with unbelievable strength, she got the plane out of the shelter and started it. The rain was pouring down—the aftermath of the cyclone, and Vivian decided she could never make the trip in the little plane.

She was sure Bark wouldn't care if she took his cabin plane. It was the only way she could bring back two doctors and supplies. She must have at least two but would they come? Would they risk it? Of course, she realized then, doctors would risk anything for the suffering.

It took all of Vivian's strength and ability to get the plane going. If she hadn't been so determined in the emergency there is little doubt she would have "cracked up" on the take-off.

There was no fear in her heart for her own safety. She felt as though her spirit had left her body and she was floating in space. Lightning flashed inches away, turning the inky blackness into day, it seemed almost certain that she might be struck. How thankful she was that she had flown to Salina so often!

She glanced at her wrist watch, and saw that it was only a little after twelve o'clock. She thought how quickly tragedy had come to her, leaving in its wake death and ruin. Life seemed a very big thing to her then. How petty all her own little worries looked through the eyes of a night of such horror.

Poor little Celeste! If she died it would break her heart. She was unworthy of a friend so loyal and dear as the little French maid had been.

Fighting the wind and the rain with her teeth bared in determination, Vivian's thoughts wandered crazily from one thing to another until she was hardly conscious that the storm was getting so much worse. The plane bobbed about like a cork, and turned almost completely over, bringing her to her senses again.

The wind was howling around her like a million devils. It came from the side, and it became harder and harder to go on.

"Oh, God, help me—poor little Celeste," she prayed wildly.

Perhaps if she were around a little to the north she might avoid the worst part of the storm. After she went two miles out of her way it seemed worse.

Then it began to hail. Large pieces of ice, like stones, beat against the cabin like hammers pounding a tattoo. The air suddenly began to get colder, and Vivian began to shiver when she saw how the sheet was collecting on the wings. It might force her down!

It was pitch black, except for the lightning flashes, and if she had to make a forced landing, God only knew where it would be. In going around to keep out of the storm, she had lost her sense of direction, and she realized that she was flying aimlessly about, getting nowhere.

She was flying high, trying to get above the storm clouds, if possible. But she knew she would have to drop down a little soon and look for some landmark. Gliding down, she banked the ship over and peered with eager eyes through the black night. A blessed lightning flash came, and she gave a glad cry. She was directly over a water tower a few miles from the town. If she kept on a straight path she would soon be there.

A landing place had never occurred to her. She racked her brain for a possible place that would serve this purpose. Then she saw the lights of the city. Tears of thankfulness came to her eyes. God had heard her prayers, after all.

Salina had not been touched by the storm—except for the wind and rain. Vivian circled above the lights, and strained her eyes for a landing place. A great flash showed an outlying farm, and she saw that there was space between the barn and the house for a landing. It was just on the outskirts of the city.

To the longest day she lived, Vivian would not be able to tell how she made the landing in the narrow, mud-filled barnyard. It was a miracle! Just as she got through the storm safely. She found herself thanking God over and over again, as she felt the earth under her feet, and stumbled ahead to her house.

She made her way to the front door and rang the bell. A moment later a head was thrust from upstairs window and a man's voice asked who was there.

"It is Mrs. Kent Johns from Bender. We have had a cyclone. The town is in ruins. Will you come down, please?"

It seemed no more than a half minute until the door was flung open. The farmer stared wild-eyed at the rain-soaked girl in the torn white skirt and tan blouse.

"How—how did you get here?" "Flew over," Vivian pointed to her plane, but he could not see it. He stared at her, unbelievably, and she had to explain it over again to him. "My airplane—it is in the yard. There are many injured. I must get at least two doctors and some supplies. Can we phone from here?"

The farmer, still dazed, was joined by his wife. She asked Vivian to come in, and wrapped a coat around her. Before the farmer would believe that she was not insane, he went out in the yard and saw the plane himself.

"Well, I'll be hornswoggled!" He shook his head at the idiosyncrasies of human nature, and returned to the house to phone the hospital.

Vivian took the phone and explained her errand to the superintendent. She waited about five minutes before she heard the voice again on the phone.

"Yes. Two doctors will start right away—and I've notified the Red Cross. They will start out immediately. The doctors will meet you at the Winton farm."

The voice was official and curt. Vivian sighed with relief, and turned to the farmer.

"Have you a pair of overalls you can loan me to wear back? A dress is hard to manage in a plane."

His wife went for them, and when she had gone the farmer grunted at Vivian:

"If you're my girl you wouldn't have one of them darn things flyin' around in the air. You'll break your foot neck, that's what you'll be doin'!"

Vivian smiled at him wanly.

"My maid—and many of my old friends—are injured and may be dying. What other way in the world would there have been to get here in less than an hour, as I have, except by flying?"

"Where's your husband," he hurt, too?" he asked, bluntly.

"My husband doesn't know I came. He probably wonders where I am."

Vivian put on the overalls and

Ken Maynard, the cowboy picture star, is authority for the statement that far from dead, the westerns have had a new field opened up to them by the talkies.

Maynard is a "Western star" who make. He cannot show costly pictures every night and make money. Five nights a week he needs a western to cut down expenses. For this reason, if no other, westerns will continue to be made. Our sets are never expensive and most of the scenes are exteriors. In this way we save a great deal of overhead which runs up the cost of other types. Gorgeous gowns, limousines and throne rooms are unknown in our pictures."

When a kid, Maynard liked Bill Hart so well he got a job changing records on a phonograph for a movie house so he could see his favorite often. One day he fell and broke most of the records. Frightened he ran away with a wagon show and was gone three weeks. Later he was with Ringling's Circus then Fox made him a film offer. He worked for First National before signing his recent Universal contract.

While pictures of the South Sea Islands, New York crooks and mystery stories have held forth stronger than ever, Maynard has made his defense of the "drama of the open spaces."

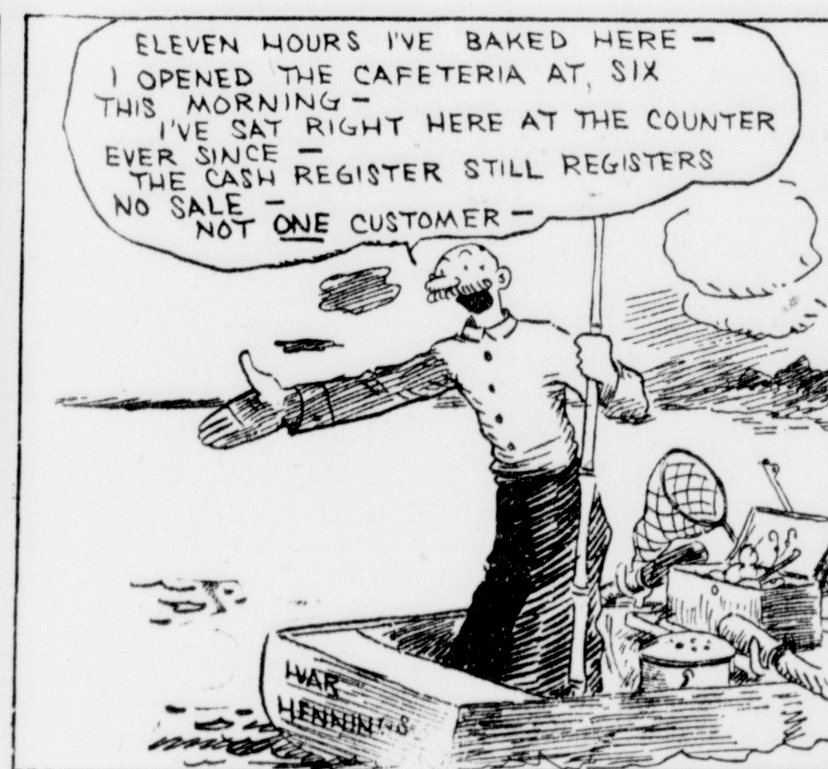

"The western picture is wholesome," he says. "Parents always like them for the morals they teach. The villain is always punished in our kind of story. Clean pictures pay and the box office will never lose money on them. How many of the parents who attend picture shows today grew up on western films? I know I did. My ambition was to imitate Warren Kerrigan and Bill Hart. The love of outdoor life is strong in every child."

Maynard looks for many new faces in western pictures soon. He looks for at least six new stars within as many months, he said. "One reason is an economic one. The small town producer must have films which cost little to

Ken Maynard, the cowboy picture star, is authority for the statement that far from dead, the westerns have had a new field opened up to them by the talkies.

Maynard is a "Western star" who stood firm when others of his ilk lost heart. He is still making westerns, his first for Universal being "The Wagon Master," with both dialogue and sound effects. "The sound pictures have put ring hoofs, bullets, Indian calls and all of nature at our command."

The luck of some animals! This pup must be a regular grouch, else he couldn't possibly look so bored with good-looking Raquel Torres trying to be friendly.

says Maynard. "Love scenes by the waterfall, with singing birds overhead, now will be even more vivid."

He says that film history has shown that pictures travel in cycles and that the westerns will come back in all their strength. The ramps of ten years ago are forgotten, but we still have vamps. In the picture cycle we now have Greta Garbo and Clara Bow, who are only other versions of Theda Bara.

CLAUSE IN CHARTER BELIEVED TO COVER CASE OF CANDIDATE

Dr. Frank M. Chambliss, one of ten candidates who have entered the race for three vacancies on City Commission, has one more year to serve as coroner of Greene County, creating the question of whether he will resign as coroner if elected a member of commission.

For any person to hold two elective offices at the same time is contrary to the provisions of Section 5 of the city charter, it is revealed.

The section specifies that "no candidate for any elective office in this city shall be eligible to office unless he has all the qualifications of an elector at the time of the election at which he is a candidate, and has been an actual resident of the city of Xenia for at least three years prior to the election, and shall hold no other elective office under the State or United States, except the office of notary public."

Dr. Chambliss, however, declared Monday he is not certain whether his resignation as coroner will become necessary in the event he is one of three successful candidates for commission seats.

He bases his belief on the fact the position of coroner is not a salaried one and that the city charter provisions might not apply in his case.

ANNUAL REPORT SHOWS COMMON PLEAS COURT TRANSACTIONS

A greater volume of business was transacted by Common Pleas Court during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1929, than during the preceding twelve months, it is indicated in the annual report of judicial statistics for the period prepared by Earl Short, deputy clerk of courts.

With 117 cases pending from the previous year, including ninety-six civil cases and twenty-one criminal matters, a total of 481 new suits were filed during the fiscal year. This number included 389 civil and ninety-two criminal actions.

The report shows that 460 of the total of 598 cases awaiting disposition were disposed of, including 356 civil and seventy-four criminal suits. Twenty-one cases were appealed and 138 are still pending. In the previous year 495 new suits were filed and 505 cases were disposed of.

In the Court of Appeals, twenty-one cases were filed with seven already pending. Nineteen were disposed of, none were appealed to the next higher court and nine remain pending.

Statistics on fines and costs during the last fiscal year disclose that fines assessed totaled $128,000 of which $3,000 was collected and $90,000 is probably collectable. Costs assessed amounted to $188,161, of which $157,924 was collected.

Jury fees increased over the preceding year, amounting to $3,585.52 against $2,443.92 the previous year. Grand jury fees totalled $401.48, while petit jury fees amounted to $1,517.04 in civil cases and $1,667 in criminal matters.

Civil judgments rendered totalled 132, involving $17,132.54 and there were 460 final decrees against 135 civil judgments and 505 final decrees the preceding period.

Seventy-three persons were in default for various forms of offenses the report revealed, while in the previous year indictments involved forty-nine persons.

With thirty-four actions already pending, ninety-two suits for divorce were filed, including fifty-one by husbands and seventy-five by wives. Seventy-eight cases were decided and forty-eight are pending. The previous year found 106 couples seeking divorce.

Forty-three inquests were held, a decrease of two from 1928. Accidental death was the verdict in twenty-one cases, three deaths were attributed to suicide, eighteen to unknown or natural causes, one to homicide and one due to intemperance.

CLAUDE IN CHARTER BELIEVED TO COVER CASE OF CANDIDATE

Dr. Frank M. Chambliss, one of ten candidates who have entered the race for three vacancies on City Commission, has one more year to serve as coroner of Greene County, creating the question of whether he will resign as coroner if elected a member of commission.

For any person to hold two elective offices at the same time is contrary to the provisions of Section 5 of the city charter, it is revealed.

The section specifies that "no candidate for any elective office in this city shall be eligible to office unless he has all the qualifications of an elector at the time of the election at which he is a candidate, and has been an actual resident of the city of Xenia for at least three years prior to the election, and shall hold no other elective office under the State or United States, except the office of notary public."

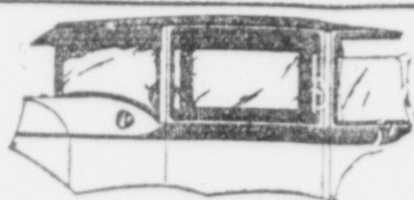

Dr. Chambliss, however, declared Monday he is not certain whether his resignation as coroner will become necessary in the event he is one of three successful candidates for commission seats.

He bases his belief on the fact the position of coroner is not a salaried one and that the city charter provisions might not apply in his case.
